The agony of the teeth

SANDY OWINGS, a Carmel Middle School eighth-grader grimaces in what appears to be pain, but it's probably more a gesture of temporary boredom than anything. That's because Owings — in a total of 13 games — emerged the overall winner in a recent chess tournament held at Carmel Middle School. Hany Fahmy was the runner-up in the tournament held this past week. For more photos of the chess tournament turn to pages 14 and 15. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Flagrant misuse

Dear Editor:

The Presbyterian church expansion is once again on the city council's agenda. This matter was turned down by the Carmel Planning Commission in 1983. It was felt then as now that the expansion is not in conformance with the General Plan — how many more hours are these people going to ask city officials to spend on this flagrant misuse of the appeal system? They are beating a dead horse.

Who's punishing who?

Dear Editor:

Help! I heard somebody on the Carmel Planning Commission say that you can't take anybody's property away and that was the reason for permitting anybody to build any kind of house he wants. Well, I call that destructive. In a town of 40-foot lots and blocks of mostly cottages, two-story monsters are just that, monsters.

If that builder robbed me of my money, there's the law to protect me and punish him. But let him rob me of my privacy, view, sun, and light, and alter my life and that of my neighbors? Who's punishing who around here, anyway?

Won't believe it

Dear Editor:

I don't believe that our mayor wanted to see our town of Carmel overrun with increasing numbers of cars parked in the residential districts, or Ocean Avenue looking tacky, or a proliferation of either art galleries or the next-thing-to-it, fast food shops, and the mess they involve, or even second stories added onto buildings. I don't know how it happened or who's responsible but I don't believe that's what our mayor wanted at all. I just won't believe it. But I bet he's the one to do something about it. I hope.

Gang of noisemakers

Dear Editor:

Cheers to Clayton Pinkerton for his letter in the March 19, issue of The Carmel Pine Cone. The time is NOW for everyone to rally 'round and make sure that the "Charlotte Townsend administration and the railroading gang" is stopped in their tracks (again). They are working day and night you can well believe to do everything in their power to undermine anything other than their own negative, selfish and arrogant ideas — even at the cost to everyone else. I think it would be an interesting survey to have a "show of hands" as to how many of this "gang" are actually property owners themselves and how many are merely "noisemakers" out to get everyone else.

A caring voice

Dear Editor:

The lead article in the March 19, Pine Cone addressing problems facing senior citizens prompts comments on a community effort aimed at easing the plight of some of these seniors in another way.

It is of more than passing interest to all the citizens of the Monterey Peninsula and to some in particular that the Community Hospital Auxiliary Outreach Program has a service called TELECARE. Literally hundreds of elderly, convalescent, shut-ins, "aloners" have been phoned every morning to merely check on their well-being. TELECARE volunteers of the Hospital Auxiliary have made nearly 350,000 phone calls, free of charge to the "subscribers" who became fast friends of the unseen "tele-callers" on the hospital end of their line.

Many emergency situations have been intercepted by these timely calls with no telling how many lives saved. It is a service of joy and security to the subscriber from a caring, vigilant voice every morning of the year. More people should avail themselves of this free service.

By phoning the Community Hospital Auxiliary Office, 625-4556, the wheels can be put in motion to start the Telecare team into action. Give them a call.

Costly presistence

Dear Editor:

Not again? In 1983 the Presbyterian Church request for further expansion was denied.

How often must they be told no. Their persistency is time consuming and costly to the church and taxpayers.

Worthwhile business

Dear Editor:

I am surprised that one of your readers believes the video-rental shop to be an example of Carmel's deterioration. I have enjoyed 32 excellent movies from Carmel Video since it opened recently and I have also benefited from the proprietor's film knowledge. Surely this is a worthwhile, resident-oriented business.

Stop lion hunting

Dear Editor:

Under the proposed "sport hunt" lions will be chased down with tracking dogs, treed, and then shot at close range. Why this is sport, I wouldn't know. These hunters have guns and they want to kill something. Does killing boost their egos; make them feel big when they brag to others? It seems to me that they are small and despicable to kill beautiful, rare animals that have every right to live.

The California Department of Fish and Game, bowing to the sport hunting interests, has proposed 210 permits to be issued for sport hunting this year. The Fish and Game Commission will be meeting April 10 in Sacramento to approve the proposal.

Letters are need immediately to the California Fish and Game Commission. Few individuals realize that California's wildlife are to be held in trust for all citizens of the state, not just those who pay for a hunting license.

The Fish and Game Department's proposal states there is no biological reason why lions could not sustain a kill quota of 210 lions, but it does not justify why lions should be killed. In fact the proposal states that killing 210 lions will not have an effect on livestock depredation or human safety — two reasons why hunting interests are clamoring for opening a hunting season on lions.

There is insufficient population information on this secretive animal to justify any kill quota. For example, the Department extrapolated from tracks of three lions in justifying the killing of 20 lions in one zone. Similar extrapolations have been made to justify the unsubstantiated overall statewide population estimate of 5,100 mountain lions.

The proposed lion killing does not answer the needs of the majority of the public which wants lions to be protected. The Fish and Game Code, besides allowing for hunting, dictates that it is state policy: "To provide for the beneficial use and enjoyment of wildlife by all citizens of the state." and' "To provide for aesthetic, educational, and nonappropriative uses of the various wildlife species." Under law, the interests of non-hunters should receive as much consideration as those of the hunters.

Please exercise your influence by writing today to: Fish and Game Commission members, 1416 9th St., Sacramento, Ca. 95814.

One year later

WHEN THE Carmel City Council meets this Tuesday it will be one year, almost to the day, since Clint Eastwood was elected mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

April 8, 1986 was a day not soon to be forgotten in Carmel's history. It was the election heard 'round the world (Cory Aquino notwithstanding). Even Ronald Reagan, who usually reserves his congratulatory phone calls to "important" events like Super Bowls or World Series, gave his fellow actor a ring the day after Eastwood's victory. Carmel had become a household word.

The news media descended upon the village in hordes, then came back at regular intervals (three-month update, six-month update, and now one-year anniversary), always asking the same questions; "What's it like? Has the town changed? Is he doing a good job? Will he run again?"

Meanwhile, Eastwood's first year in office has gone relatively much smoother than Reagan's past year in office.

But there's still another year (maybe more?) to go and still quite a bit on the agenda. Still to come are parking garages, a library annex, senior housing, a performance arts center, Hatton Canyon Freeway, open space and water issues, beach walkway, and (cue dramatic music), the General Plan.

The General Plan may be the single most important issue to face the Eastwood administration yet. What happens with the General Plan — which as you know, unless you've been living in a cave in Sri Lanka for the past several months, is being revised, or "softened," to use the words of the General Plan Committee's chairman — may be the yardstick on which this administration is measured.

The committee has made wholesale changes to the plan, some much-needed and a long time in coming, others very questionable, perhaps bordering on dangerous. True, the screws did need to be loosened somewhat, especially on the business community, but to what extent? It is hoped not to the point where everything starts to fall apart...screwless, as it were.

There's at least one more public hearing on the proposed revisions (there have been three so far), scheduled for April 15. Then comes the unenviable task of figuring out what to do with all that public input, which has been considerable, and frankly, not all that complimentary.

The Carmel Planning Commission is saddled with the task of giving a recommendation to the city council. The buck stops there.

Undoubtedly several more public hearings will follow; the amount of input will grow. How all this input will be incorporated into the revised plan — or not incorporated, as the case may be — is still anybody's guess. The fact remains that the General Plan will be revised in some shape or form.

Thus it's up to the citizens of this city to continue their input, their vigil, if they want the General Plan to reflect their needs and desires.

A quick look at this week's city council agenda shows that the significant issues that appeared on that huge first agenda (45 items) more than a year ago has not abated. The General Plan revisions will soon appear on that same agenda. The public's interest should not abate either.

Bennett, church appeal top council agenda

By DAVID LELAND

RESIDENTS EXPECTING a final decision regarding the fate of the Bennett property as a result of March's Carmel City Council meeting will have to wait — there's been somewhat of a problem.

At last month's meeting, councilmembers were advised by City Atty. Don Freeman not to divide the Bennett property, a single parcel of land, in two because the public would not have been notified of that action.

The council chose to ignore Freeman's advice and instead directed the planning staff to prepare a resolution for two specific plans with six residential lots on one and three on the other.

But during the month, Freeman again considered the Brown Act implications regarding posting of an open meeting agenda which cannot be changed.

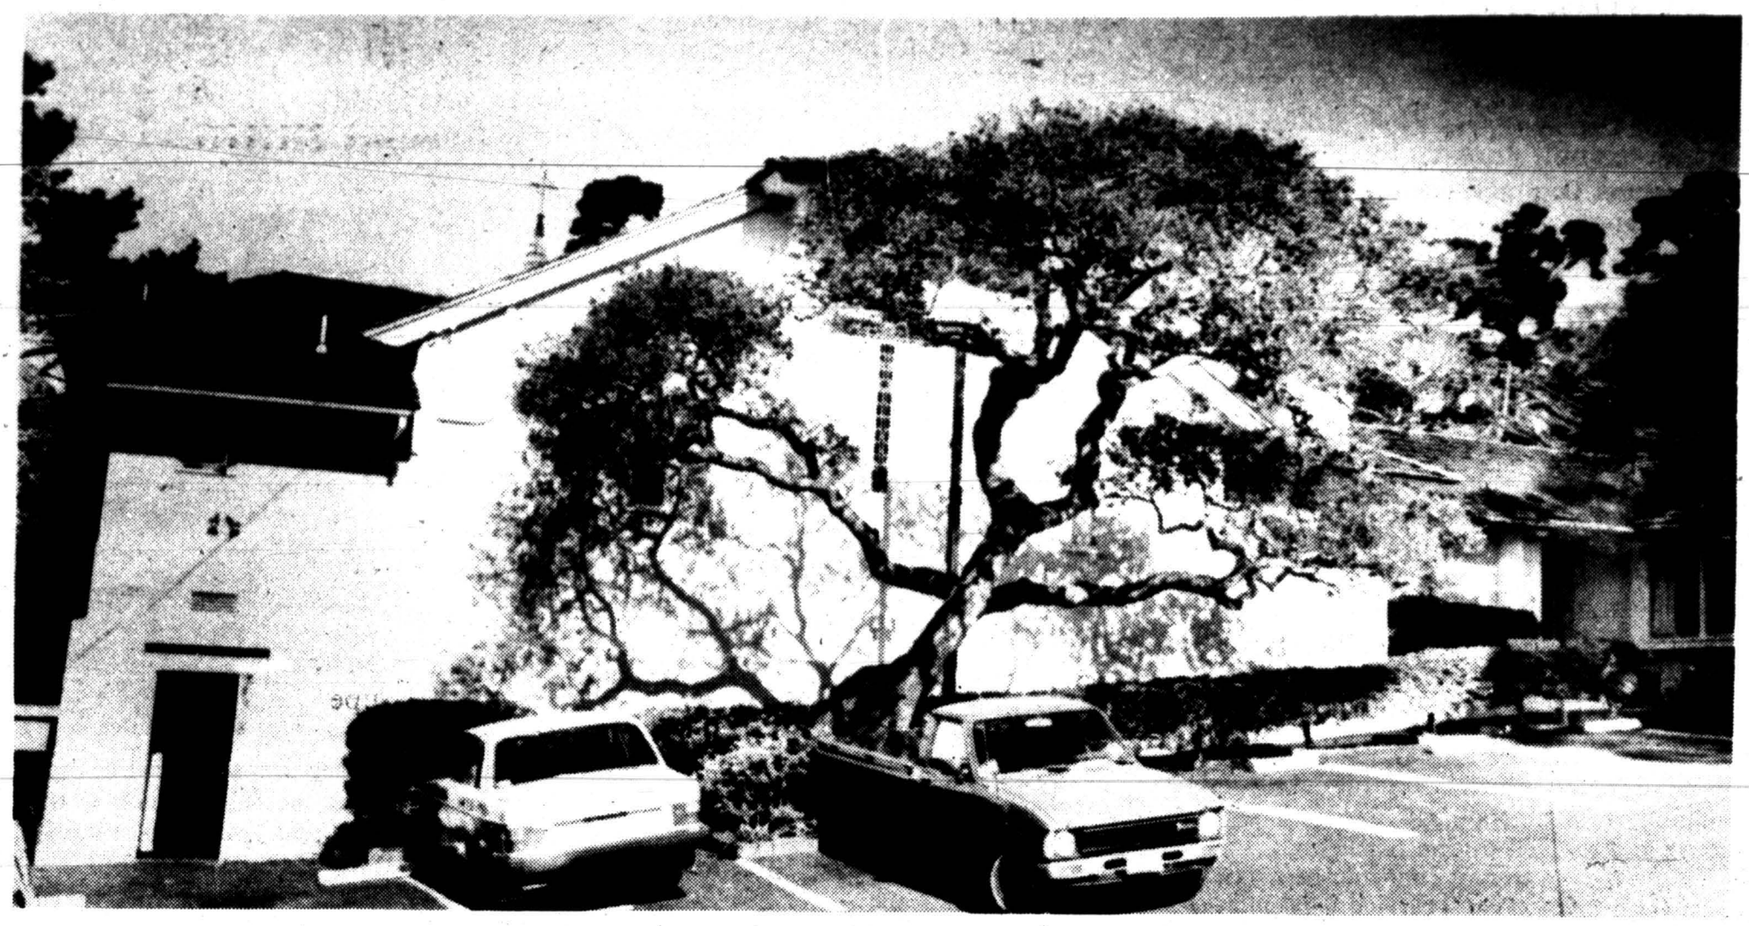
With this in mind, he advised city staff to put the matter on hold and place it on April's agenda again so all legalities would be met.

The city council will meet in an early 2 p.m. session in the chambers at city hall to hear a feasibility study regarding the proposed Stanton Theater at Sunset Center. It then will adjourn into closed session at 3 p.m. and from there will move to its 4 p.m. meeting in the Carmel Woman's Club, located at Eighth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

The proposed 11-lot Bennett project on an acre and a half-plus unbuilt site, located between Dolores and San Carlos streets, has been challenged by nearby residents and environmentalists since the planning commission began to hear testimony on the issue last July.

The matter before the city council this month has two options for members to consider. One is for members to vote to keep the parcel as one plan, which would either need an EIR or a negative declaration (no significant environmental impacts).

Or, the council could divide the plans, such as it did last month, into upper and lower portions. At last month's meeting the council said the three-lot parcel needed an environmental study for possible impacts of flooding and drainage, while the larger parcel would not affect the environment and could receive a negative declaration.



DURING LAST month's Carmel City Council meeting, councilmembers voted to stop any further expansion at the Carmel Presbyterian Church. But this month, churchmembers are appealing that decision to the council with what they say are "new findings." (Holly McFarland photo.)

ALSO BEFORE the city council this month is a plea from the Carmel Presbyterian Church asking for a reversal of a council decision; a possible breakthrough in negotiations on the Crocker Bank building, which could house the Harrison Memorial Library annex; and a request for a new and improved city questionnaire.

• Last month the city council voted to stop any further expansion of the Presbyterian church, located at Mountain View and Junipero avenues.

The church had planned to add a second story and underground parking garage. Adding the second story would have increased church seating by about 50, while the garage would have cut parking spaces by 10.

The council, in its decision, said the land use element in the general plan forbad any more building in that area because it would encroach into the surrounding residential neighborhood.

The church plans to present evidence to the council of additional parking that can be incorporated into the plan. It also will present design modifications that were made in conjunction with the planning commission, according to churchmember George Walker, who is also an attorney representing the church.

• In its closed session, the council will hear a counter-proposal by Wells Fargo Bank regarding the vacant Crocker Bank building, which could be used to house the library annex at Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street.

The asking price for the building began at $2.25 million.

If the council accepts the counter-proposal, the matter will come before the council at its public meeting this Tuesday to decide if it wants to accept the offer and, if so, how financing will be arranged.

• Also on this month's agenda is a request from Barbara Brooks, who is asking the city to conduct another citywide questionnaire.

Brooks, who served on the general plan committee in Pleasant Hill, said she is asking for the new survey because the current general plan committee is referring to two previous city surveys as invalid and inadequate because there was not an accurate cross-section of respondents.

The only way, she said, for serious questions to be answered is to conduct a new questionnaire that all sides are satisfied with.

"It seems to me if they (general plan committee) are interested in public input, they would want another," she said.

Brooks is suggesting a new group of faces to form a committee that would come up with a new set of questions; they would be advised by the general plan committee.

"The main thing is to come to a consensus of questions and respondents," she said. After the questionnaire is completed, residents should accept the findings as valid, she said.

Flanders sale found not consistent with General Plan

By NANCY HILLS

THE ONGOING Flanders Mansion and Martin Way properties discussion played to a packed house March 25 as the Carmel Planning Commission unanimously determined that the sale was not in keeping with the city's General Plan.

Numerous Carmel area residents — from inside and outside the city limits — in attendance at the meeting spoke in opposition to the sale of both parcels located in Mission Trail Park.

Additionally, a more than 500 signature petition opposing the sale was acknowledged by the commission and was put into the public record. (The Carmel Pine Cone erronously reported two weeks ago the petition included signatures for the sale of the project. The signatures which said "yes" or "no" were not for or against retaining the property but whether or not the signee was a Carmel voter.)

The vote reversed a two-year-old commission decision that found the sale of the property was consistent with the general plan.

The current city council voted in December that the Martin Way property and Flanders Mansion are surplus property and began the sale process. The council planned to use the money from the sale to help pay for the purchase of the vacated Crocker Bank building for a library annex and other proposed city projects.

The sale would have included a two-acre plus meadow with a view of Carmel Mission and the 1.43 acres of Mission Trail Park where Flanders Mansion is located.

The council will consider the planning commission's decision and the sale again, possibly in May.

In the meantime, a committee has been created from a combination of the Arboretum Committee, Forestry Commisson, Recreation Commission and interested citizens to discuss what to do with the mansion.

The house is need of approximately $360,000 in repairs before it can be used for a public purposes. It is currently rented to private citizens.

All three of the groups had recommended against selling the mansion or the lands.

Pleas made not to sell the property by residents and non-residents alike included letters from attorneys outlining reasons that the sale would require an environmental impact report (EIR) and park users and neighbors who did not wish to see the area subdivided for residential homes.

"Please don't sell it, buy more," said Carmel resident and architect Joyce Stevens.

Stevens told commissioners that only 9 percent of Carmel is city-owned parkland, less of a percentage than either Pacific Grove or Monterey owns.

Cindy Lloyd, one of the organizers of the petition drive against selling the property, asked the commission "to halt the process that can lead to the sale" by declaring it not consistent with the general plan.

Lloyd likened the commission's move to preservation of the property to — "though much smaller" — to John Muir's attempts to save Yosemite National Park.

Others stated that it was the only piece of property where residents could enjoy the outdoors in the city without competing with tourists.

Commissioner Bruce Roberts, who began the commissioners' comments, said after getting his packet "it didn't take me long to make up my mind" that the sale was not in conformance with the general plan. All the commissioners agreed.

"It seems we spend more and more time looking for what we have less and less of," Chairman Ken White said about open space.

However, Commissioner Bill Brown said while he was in agreement with the commission, he was concerned about how the city would pay for future projects it had planned on, such as the library annex and parking garages.

"I concur with what the other commissioners have to say," said Commissioner Carla Ramsey, "but my major concern is what to do with the building."

The final unanimous vote was greeted with applause by the audience.

IN OTHER business:

• The commission approved Gerald McFall's home furnishing shop use permit application for the former location of the Studio Theater on Dolores Street, which was vacated in December.

Though the commissioners agreed it was bad to lose the dinner theater, there was no legal basis to turn the application down.

Less than a week later, the decision was appealed to the city council by Commissioner Bruce Roberts, who voted against the change in use for the location stating that "as a planning body, the future of the heritage of Carmel is what we are supposed to be protecting."

In a later interview with The Carmel Pine Cone Roberts said he based his appeal, filed Tuesday, on the general plan's direction to "encourage a mix of uses in Carmel."

Roberts said he agrees that a property owner "has a right to do whatever he wants with his land, but where you have a unique community like Carmel, you have to take the good of the whole over the one and The Studio Theater is the oldest dinner theater in California.

"If it wasn't for the water moratorium, it would be a different game plan — find another space," he added.

But because it is a high water user, it cannot be relocated, Roberts said, and that is the reason he is appealing the decision.

GroveMont Theater Arts Center submitted a letter to the planning commission, expressing its interest in continuing the dinner theater operation which closed in December. Stephen Moorer, GroveMont executive director, told The Carmel Pine Cone that they were still interested in pursuing the project.

Attempts to reach the property owner Robert Evans, Jr. before press time were unsuccessful. Evans is the son of Councilman Bob Evans, also an owner of the property, and is handling the lease negotiations. Councilman Evans stated he is not involved in the matter because of his position on the city council.

Carmel High students take to Awareness Day

By DAVID LELAND

WHOEVER SAID high school students would rather do anything than be in school should have attended Awareness Day at Carmel High School Wednesday.

The campus buzzed with excitement as about 800 youngsters filed into the auditorium for the kick-off assembly for the daylong series of workshops. Speakers inluded Supt. Bob Infelise, Mayor Clint Eastwood and 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

"If I'd have known I was going to live this long, I would have taken better care of myself," said Eastwood, paraphrasing comedian Phil Harris' famous line.

But the message came across loud and clear: You won't be young forever — you had better learn to take care of youself now.

Awareness Day came about as part of a community effort involving professionals, parents and high school staff. The purpose is to educate the students on varied subjects ranging from alcohol and drugs to sexual abuse and low self-esteem problems.

"Give the Awareness Day your best shot," Eastwood said. "You'll carry it with you the rest of your life."

'When we learn facts, we can make a difference,' said senior and peer counselor Juliet Peck, citing her reason for enrolling in an AIDS awareness class. 'It's about living with education and not ignorance.'

During the 30-minute schoolwide gathering, it appeared students needed little prodding to become involved in the one-day presentation of classes.

"I think it will be good because it will keep people informed," said junior Dana Hindson, who said she is taking class in AIDS awareness and self-esteem.

The theme of students needing to think ahead was also touched upon by Strasser Kauffman as she spoke to the youngsters before Awareness Day classes began.

"Life gets a lot better," she said. "You have to pace yourself."

Strasser Kauffman added that young people also need to learn to live with boredom; life will not always be exciting every minute. By doing this, students may avoid the pitfalls of quick-fix solutions such as alcohol and drug abuse.

Also taking part in the school assembly and urging their fellows to take advantage of the day were 100 Peer Counselors, who work with fellow students at the high school and at Carmel Middle School.

A well-received bunch, the peer counselors were given the same thunderous applause by students as was given to Eastwood.

"When we learn facts, we can make a difference," said senior and peer counselor Juliet Peck, citing her reason for enrolling in the AIDS awareness class. "It's about living with education and not ignorance."

PECK, WHO knows how difficult it is to be a high school student from her experience as a peer counselor, said she was especially grateful for the day aimed at student enrichment.

"We have to be here (school) anyway," she said. "It's a hard time for all of us. The depression workshop is a great way for us to get in touch with what we are doing."

Thirty-eight professionals from the peninsula, who are currently used by the counseling staff at the high school for special problems, donated their day to present 70 workshops.

This year marks the second time the high school has presented Awareness Day, with the first being in 1984.

"It's such a massive undertaking, it was felt it should be a two-year cycle," said Marie Ishida, high school principal. She added that approach lets the students experience two awareness days during their high school years.

She also said, with the exception of five students whose parents will not allow them to take part in any sex education, all of the high school students would see the AIDS education film Sex, Drugs and AIDS during Awareness Day.

One of the direct recipients of Awareness Day is Mike Gunderson, a junior and senior counselor.

Gunderson utilizes the services of peninsula professionals when a student has a problem, but with Wednesday's program he hopes the students will become more aware of themselves before a problem arises.

"Kids that might be teetering on a problem will come to me," he said. "The message is we care about you as a person, not an academic machine."

Gunderson said putting on Awareness Day was like scheduling a semester for one day — each student had a choice of workshops to choose from, which had to add up to a day's worth of classes.

This feat of complicated scheduling was performed by volunteer parents, he said.

Gunderson said he appreciates professionals coming to school. He also learns.

"It's hard to be an expert in all areas," he

ONE OF the most sought-after classes offered on Awareness Day was Good Self-Esteem: The Most Important Relationship You Will Ever Have.

Taught by Janie Rommel-Eichorn, a Monterey-based counselor, the class attempted to make the youngster aware of their self-identity.

Rommel-Eichorn began the class by having each student introduce himself, while saying one thing they like about themself.

It appeared most of the 22 girls and 10 boys enrolled in the class had a pretty good grip on their self-esteem, with answers ranging from "I like my smile" and "I'm always reasonably happy" to "I just like myself" and "I like myself 'cause I'm an extrovert."

Next, Rommel-Eichorn had the class attempt to define self-esteem, which was a little trickier. The class came up with a person who: feels good about himself, has confidence, a positive attitude and takes pride in what he does.

Rommel-Eichorn also guided the youngsters through an exercise of picking from a multiple choice of feelings that were listed on a piece of paper they were handed out at the beginning of class.

An example of these: "I am happy; I am sick; I am good; and I am dumb."

To take with them, the students received a declaration of self-esteem.

"In all the world, there is no one else exactly like me," the declaration says. "Everything that comes out of me is authentically mine because I alone choose it."

The last paragraph of the declaration acts as an affirmation for the students to live by.

"I have the tools to survive, to be close to others, to be productive and to make sense and order out of the world of people and things outside me. I own me and, therefore, I can engineer me. I am me and I am OK."

Little family project up before planning agency

By NANCY HILLS

THE CURRENT Carmel Planning Commission is finally getting its chance to review the Little family's Carmel Sands Motel/Simpson's restaurant reconstruction project.

The commission will consider at 3 p.m., Wednesday, April 8, in Carmel City Council Chambers final design review for the rebuilding and addition of 3,000 square feet of the motel and restaurant on the corner of Fifth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

The new building will include an underground garage and office space for Little's Carmel Insurance Company, currently located above Nielsen's Market on San Carlos.

Matt Little, spokesman for the family, said that final design review is one of the last steps before construction begins on the project, which began more than five years ago. If everything goes smoothly, he said, construction could begin this fall.

The project must still get a Coastal Commission permit and the urgency water ordinance must be altered.

The city council may consider the ordinance in May, but, with that time schedule, it would not become law until July.

The ordinance currently restricts new construction in the city that changes water consumption, except remodels on private homes. The Little project, however, is projected to reduce water use.

In other business, the commission will:

- Review a master use permit of an underground garage for Mayor Clint Eastwood's proposed office/retail complex on San Carlos Street. The project also has been held up due to the water connection moratorium.
- Review a use permit for an art gallery in the current Bennett Sculpture space on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

Free assistance on tax returns

ONE OF the most dreaded days of the year is April 15, the deadline for filing income tax returns.

It's a date that seems to creep up too fast for our liking. We seem to promise ourselves that this is the year we'll do our returns early. But, like New Year's resolutions, it's easy to say, hard to do. For many, filing even a simple income tax return can be like translating Egyptian hieroglyphics.

But according to Burney Threadgill, manager of the Great American Savings Bank in Monterey, help is available for procrastinators and nonprocrastinators who need assistance filing their returns.

"In an effort to ease the task of filing simple tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service and the Franchise Tax Board annually provide funding for a free assistance program called 'VITA' (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance)," Threadgill said. "VITA is offered throughout California during March and April, up to the final tax deadline. Anyone may use it as long as their reports are simple and do not involve income generated in additional states."

VITA offers a toll-free information service at 1-800-424-1040. This is a direct line to a VITA representative who can determine the nearest VITA office, phone number and times the service is available, based on the caller's zip code. Convalescing, disabled or other homebound individuals can schedule an appointment at their home by calling the toll-free number.

Threadgill also reminds taxpayers and investors there is still time to open an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) under the old tax guidelines.

"We've all heard about the new Tax Reform Law that took effect at the beginning of this year," he said. "But as far as the IRS is concerned, the new directives for IRA accounts do not take effect until after the 1986 tax deadline of April 15.

"Until that date, any working person, whether or not he or she participates in another retirement plan and regardless of the amount of income, can make an IRA contribution for 1986 under the old rules.

Carmel Valley house is an oasis in sea of allergies

By DAVID LELAND

THIS IS a story about a house.

It's a house that looks like many of the other Spanish-style homes that dot the Carmel Valley hills. But inside the air is pure.

For Virginia Greenburg this dwelling is an oasis in a world of allergy-causing materials that have plagued her since childhood. This house is contaminant-free.

"Despite the fact that I'm basically a healthy person, I've had ups and downs my entire life," said Greenburg, who suffers allergic reactions to everything from food to printer's ink.

After trying the more traditional methods of coping with her hypersensitivity — which causes Greenburg's heart rate to increase, leading to palpitations — she sought the help of allergist Dr. Stig Robert Erlander, a biochemist in Southern California.

Erlander, who has worked with upwards of 5,000 patients in the past 30 years, suggested a change in her environment to help cure her problem. He said it could be the materials composing her home that were causing her allergies.

So, after living in Carmel for 13 years, Greenburg and her husband Reginald tackled the idea of constructing a new home in the valley with hopes of finally ending a lifelong dilemma.

The first step was to find a building contractor who could carry out the project. The Greenburgs settled on George Lino, whom they had met several years earlier through a mutual friend.

They explained to Lino that it was the toxins emitted by building material that caused much of Virginia's allergic reaction. This house would need to be built with a creative touch.

For the four-plus months it took to build the house Lino thrust himself into the task, coming up with alternative ideas to traditional problems in building the 1,700 square-foot structure.

The major culprit, Virginia told Lino, was urea-formaldehyde, a dangerous chemicle used in most construction materials such as particle board, insulation and plywood.

Lino was cautious and thorough. While the fumes coming from insulation are not as great as from particle board because of the baking process the spun glass goes through, he took no chances. Lino wrapped each portion of insulation individually in aluminum foil.

In order to accomplish this he had to find a company that made rolls big enough to make the job feasible. He couldn't very well use the kitchen-size dispenser.

After making phone calls around the state, Lino found a company in Los Angeles that could do the job and special ordered the material.

THE ROLLS of aluminum arrived weighing 25 pounds and measuring 40 inches in width. Lino then went to work on the insulation.

"The house was dazzling when it was wrapped in aluminum foil," Virginia Greenburg remembered.

Next, Lino had to make sure that no fumes leaked from the pine or oak wood used to construct the Greenburg's house. So he sprayed the entire home with a mixture of lemon juice and olive oil.

To accomplish this, Lino bought three 160-pound cases of lemons. And, alternating between an lemon squeezer and a press, he and a fellow worker produced four gallons of juice within three hours.

He then added 12 gallons of olive oil and, using a paint sprayer, applied the mixture to the walls and brushed the concoction onto the floor joints.

Not only does this solution eliminate fumes, Lino said, but it also makes it unnecessary for any paints or varnish — which bring with them their own poisons.

Even the oak living room floor has a rich brown stain that comes from a natural pigment solution that is mixed in. It is impossible to tell the difference between this mixture and traditional varnish normally applied to floors.

"I want to put up a sign that says 'Don't step on the floor,' " Virginia said, as she admired the woodwork.

Even though it cost "quite a bit more" than the average house, according to Reginald, a retired chemist, the Greenburgs followed Erlander's advice to the letter.

That includes a hot-water, radiator-type heating system, which eliminates any recirculating dusty air from being forced into the home.

Lino said the machinery that operates the heater is located in the back of the house in a separate shed so the gas-powered motor has no chance of contaminating the air within the living area.

"This is my first experience at doing this," said Lino, who has been building homes for the past 28 years. He doesn't, however, think the Greenburg's house is a fluke.

"People are getting more conscious of their environment," he said. He added that many people who live in trailers are becoming aware that the particle board used for construction is having adverse effects on their health.

MEANWHILE, Virginia has settled into her new home quite comfortably and is waiting for the "dust to settle" from the building and unloading of boxes.

"I feel better in general," she said, describing her health since moving into the house earlier in March. "I can't tell yet, but I feel confident."

Many times when a person begins to overcome some allergies he becomes more sensitive to others, she said.

In the meantime, Virginia keeps in constant contact with Erlander, who monitors her health by telephone.

"These things can be relayed by symptoms," said Virginia, who has begun alternating foods in her diet to help improve her environmental changes on a "psychic kind of basis."

Erlander, who suffered from asthma and hypertension for many years before improving his environment and diet, said a person does not have to build a home from scratch in order to improve his living conditions.

He said the best method for correcting the living environment is to fix up a pre-World War II home, which has less toxins in the building materials than modern structures.

"The things they put in houses now are a disaster," he said.

Virginia is optimistic about her recovery from the constant strain of allergy attacks. She has thrown herself into the task of fixing up her new home and also spends time teaching a half-dozen students classical piano.

Erlander said he has high hopes that the Greenburg's allergy-free house will work wonders on Virginia's condition.

"If we can get the environment corrected," he said, "the success rate is good."

Results are in: Child care needed in CUSD

By DAVID LELAND

A SURVEY taken during the month of March bears out what Carmel Unified School District board members have suspected for quite some time: there is a definite need for child care within the district.

The survey, which polled both parents with and without a child enrolled in a district school, paves the way toward a child care center proposed for Carmelo School, located on Carmel Valley Road about five miles from Highway 1.

Currently Carmelo School, which was vacated about four years ago because of declining enrollment, houses the Frohman Academy in one of its buildings.

"We had a good guess of the community's needs but we just didn't have the data," said Chuck Phillips, director of educational services.

Indeed the numbers gathered from the poll show parents of 169 children between the ages of 1 and 5 years have an immediate need for child care and would use a districtwide program if it was available.

This is most clearly demonstrated in the 112 children from ages 2½ to 5, where respondents said 95 children would be enrolled if there was a child care program started within the district.

Only 13 parents in that age group (2½ to 5) said they would not use the district to satisfy their child care needs, while four respondents said they might use district child care.

By the shear volume of the response, Phillips said there may be a built-in problem in trying to accomodate that many children.

Four rooms have been slated for the child care center at Carmelo School which, according to state social service licensing standards, could house about 90 children.

But the CUSD, in order to maintain high standards of child care, plans to care for between only 60 and 70 children, Phillips said.

"We believe there will still be child care needs unmet within the community," Phillips said. He added that "It (Carmelo School child care) may not solve everything, but it may do nicely."

Phillips said part of the crunch will be eliminated by the hours that the parents need care for their child. Some will need only morning care, while others will only require help in the afternoon, he said.

Phillips said the CUSD's goal is to have a child care center in operation by next fall when school opens.

IN ORDER to accomplish this aim, which will cost between $25,000 and $100,000 to start, Phillips said the district is applying for both state grants from the Department of Education and donations from local foundations.

Once carried out, the child care center will be self-funding, Phillips said, but until that time there are expenses which must be met. These include floor coverings, kitchen renovation and purchasing furniture.

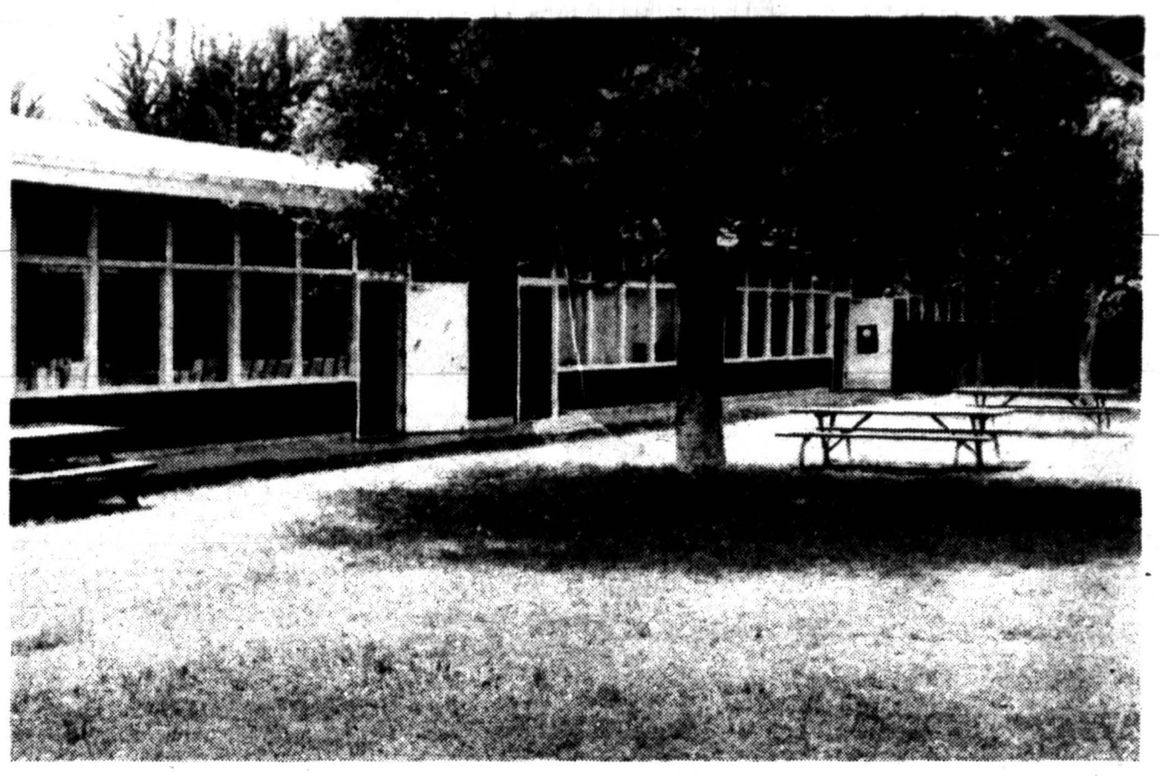
Also, there will have to be enough money available to finance staff salaries until the program gets off the ground, Phillips said.

Along with all-day care for children, the Carmelo School daycare center plans several other programs. These are:

- A pre-school education program. Children enrolled in all-day care would automatically participate in this program.
- Drop-in child care service. This would provide "as-needed" service for parents.
- A program for children to participate biweekly or on a limited schedule in the preschool program.

One of the initial ideas for the Carmelo School child care program had been to conduct after-school care for students attending Carmel River School and Tularcitos School. But due to transportation complications involved in busing the students to Carmelo, those plans have changed.

Phillips said both those schools currently offer limited daycare. These programs, he said, would be "beefed up" before summer and would remain "on-site."



SHOWN HERE in 1981 when Carmelo School was still in operation, these now-vacant classrooms will house a proposed childcare center. CUSD officials plan to have the childcare center in operation by next fall.

Donating blood has become a safe, painless process

EVERY DAY, millions of people throughout the world require transfusions of blood. Accidents, injury, disease, surgery and childbirth may require significant amounts of this precious, life-giving substance.

Recent advances in blood banking can assure adequate amounts of blood to hospitals and health care facilities only if volunteers are willing to accept responsibility for donating blood according to Health Tips, a publication of California Medical Education and Research Foundation.

Donating blood is not painful, nor does it threaten or harm the donor in any way. The only condition that can be "caught" when donating blood is the good feeling of helping those persons who so desperately need specific types of blood.

Blood banks have established a number of cautionary procedures to ensure that blood donation is safe for both the donor and the recipient. A potential donor is screened carefully and given several medical tests before allowed to give blood.

A potential donor should be between 17 and 65 years of age and weigh over 110 pounds. Sometimes the blood bank physician will allow persons over age 65 or under age 17 and persons weighing less than 110 pounds to donate if it is established that it will not be dangerous to the donor.

Blood bank personnel will check the donor's temperature, blood pressure and pulse to screen persons who may have an infection or other health problem. Temperature should not exceed 37.5 degrees Celsius or 99.5 degrees Fahrenheit. An acceptable blood pressure reading may be between 90/50 and 180/100 and a normal pulse range is 50 to 100 beats per minute, although some athletes may have lower pulse readings.

A sample of blood taken from the fingertip will be obtained to determine blood type and hemoglobin concentration. There are eight major types of blood: A, B, O, AB and their associated Rh type, either positive or negative. Hemoglobin is the oxygen-carrying red part of blood cells. Anemia is associated with a low hemoglobin level. The normal hemoglobin count for men is around 15²1 grams per deciliter of blood and for women, is around 14²1 g/dl. Eight weeks is required between donations in order for the body to build up the bloods's supply of red cells.

In addition to these tests, a potential donor is asked a series of questions aimed at learning about the potential donor's past medical history and current health to determine the suitability of the donor and his or her blood.

Several questions are asked to determine the general health of the potential donor. For obvious reasons, it is important that a donor and a donor's blood are healthy. The admitting nurse will ask the potential donor if he or she has ever had any serious illness, or been hospitalized or taken any medication in the last six months.

The nurse will ensure that the potential donor is feeling well today and inquire whether he or she has ever been deferred as a blood donor or had trouble donating blood. It is important to determine if a problem existed in the past that may still prevent an individual from giving blood.

Persons with heart disease, chest pain, shortness of breath, convulsions, seizures, fainting spells, blood disease, cancer or respiratory problems are advised against donating blood. This protects both the donor and the recipient.

Potential donors are asked if they have had any vaccinations or immunizations in the past year. For a period after immunization, the immunizing agent may circulate in an individual and cause disease in anyone receiving the blood. The American Association of Blood Banks suggests acceptable time limits for various vaccinations.

A patient who has had dental work in the past three days may be deferred from donating. This is because dental work may lead to bacteremia (bacteria in the blood). These bacteria, which come from the mouth and enter the bloodstream via opened vessels in the gums, could be transmitted by transfusion and cause disease in the recipient.

Specific questions are asked and special tests are conducted to determine if the potential donor is at risk for AIDS, hepatitis or malaria--diseases that can be transmitted through the blood. Questions are aimed at potential risk factors for transmission of these diseases as well as possible undetected symptoms. In addition, all blood banks in the United States currently screen all donated blood for antibodies in HTLV-III, the virus associated with AIDS.

Shared wisdom

I'VE JUST come back from a long walk along the beach, and up along the Mission Trail. A thoughtful hike.

Monday, I had seen several large otters playing and eating sea urchins in the rocks at the end of Carmel Beach. Wednesday, there was a Coast Guard copter on the beach, a boat hovering just past the breakers, ambulances, a fire engine, and a crowd of interrupted strollers squinting into the surf, as frogmen finally pulled out the man who had saved the 10-year-old boy, who had been swept out in a wild riptide.

'But then I think, I remember again. And it makes me want to weep that more people do not pause and observe respect for the awesomeness, the power of nature.'

The boat hovered on the breakers, rising and disappearing behind the swells. I stood on the beach watching, as the chopper lifted off in a swirl of sand to take frogmen into the surf. It seemed to hover endlessly over the breakers. The wind, whipping the waves into the blades of the chopper, obscured all vision. Police held back the crowd.

With the mist and wind and setting sun tearing in my eyes, I watched from the beach as a head surfaced in the foam and then disappeared. Then again. An arm reached up towards the heavy beating blades. A dark half-silhouette suspended against the molten quicksilver. The wind was very cold. People on the beach yelled, pointed, and ran towards the disappearing blades. Even the inaudible sea.

They were still thumping on his heart as they carried the stretcher up the narrow steep stone steps to the ambulance. He died on the way to the hospital, died having saved a young school boy. His friends nodded as they learned of his death. He was an artist, a teacher of children, on his day off. A sensitive man.

PUT ME in mind of another day about a month ago when I sat in the amphitheater of Carmel River Beach and watched two excited little brothers dance in the surf. Their soft little bodies, arms high in the air with each wet toe and knee, were opaque in fragile silhouette against the towering curtain of surf. Thundering 30-foot waves that clawed on the high-angled beach. Their parents stood above on the dam of the river, stringing a kite in the distracting wind, their backs to the thunder.

My friend and I, both of us, also, artists and teachers, grew uncomfortable in the drama. Our marvel at the awing surf, grew into tension as we noted the danger. We exchanged looks, comments, concern. And finally, stifling down an awkwardness at disturbing the delight of the family. I walked over and asked the mother if she was aware of the nature and danger of our coastal beaches. She was stunned and grateful for the concern. I was greatly relieved. I didn't know if I could have gone into that surf.

Years ago, I went into raging freezing waters for a friend. A sister. It was a helpless situation in which the force of current and breaking of rocks set life into a swirl and brought infinity to the forefront of vision. Friend disappears. Self disappears. There is only the water and a roaring in the ears. A roaring silence. I was swept under and shot through the current. When I finally surfaced, I was rescued by my brother who spotted me in the chaos. And as grateful as I am for this life, I would not have him do it again, though I feel I would do it again myself.

But then I think, I remember again. And it makes me want to weep that more people do not pause and observe respect for the awesomeness, the power of nature.

It is our nature, as human beings, as this young man so eloquently demonstrated, to be generous. Can we not also demonstrate our generosity by personally cautioning those who do not apprehend what they see before them, on the beach, do not observe the posted warning signs...before we find ourselves in the act of unquestionable rescue.

If living in this articulate and seductive landscape does, indeed, give us more wisdom of its nature, shall we not share it with those who come to visit, who do not know or understand? Is it not our nature?

'Rescuing' of seal pups may result in more harm

EACH SPRING many harbor seal pups can be found along California beaches. Some are orphaned or injured; but sometimes unattended, healthy pups are removed from beaches by well-meaning citizens who are unaware of the pups' mothers feeding offshore.

Harbor seal mothers will not come ashore with humans in sight. Once separated from its mother, a pup's chances of survival are drastically reduced. An intended "rescue" of a seemingly orphaned pup may result in injury or death.

In 1986 harbor seal pups picked up by unauthorized people and admitted to the California Marine Mammal Center near Sausalito experienced the lowest survival rate (51 percent) of any group of marine mammals treated there, despite intensive care. Last spring 10 pups were picked up illegally and taken to the center. One survivor, a pup named "Mickey," suffered permanent brain damage as a result. Hikers found him alone on a beach near a major pupping area, picked him up and kept him overheated for five hours, causing heat stroke and cerebral edema. The hikers' good intentions eliminated any chance that Mikey will ever return to the sea as a normal, healthy harbor seal.

National Marine Fisheries Service, the federal agency charged with enforcing the Marine Mammal Protection Act, warns that is is unlawful to capture or detain, even temporarily, any marine mammal. Violations of the act could result in federal prosecution and a maximum civil penalty of $10,000 and a maximum criminal penalty of $20,000 and one year in jail. Also, leaving rescues to authorized, properly-trained organizations protects the public from the danger of bites and infection by injured or diseased animals.

Anyone finding a stranded seal, sea lion or dolphin can help by:

- Observing the animal from a distance to determine its size, weight, physical characteristics, apparent condition and accessibility.
- Call local authorized rehabilitation center or local offices of California Department of Fish & Game or National Marine Fisheries Service.
- If possible, remain with the animal, keeping other humans and dogs away until a rescue team arrives. In the case of an apparently orphaned pup, after calling, remain concealed and watch to see if the mother returns.

'Blue sheeters' create stir in Carmel politics

By NANCY HILLS

LATELY, CARMEL residents may get more than their usual mail when they go to the post office.

Someone may hand them a "blue sheet" of paper, on it a list that zeroes in on city issues and current policies to be addressed at upcoming public meetings.

The fliers presaged the formation of a new group which is interested in keeping the residents of Carmel active and informed about city issues and policies that concern its members.

The latest "blue sheets," which first appeared last November before a town hall meeting, focus on the proposed changes in the General Plan, urging residents to attend the hearings.

After a roll call of the suggested deletions in the Land Use Element of the plan, the third and latest "blue sheet" states, "THESE REVISIONS show a substantial DISREGARD for the wishes of the CITIZENS as expressed in the QUESTIONNAIRES of 1982 and 1985."

Policies concerning Ocean Avenue, removal of limitations on numbers and types of businesses, and one discouraging inharmonious new development and remodeling are some proposed deletions listed.

Written at the bottom of the paper is: "Concerned Carmel Citizens, Box 21, Carmel," apparently a generic moniker used by a fluctuating group of Carmel residents.

Former Councilman Robert Stephenson, a draftsman, readily admits he does the "artwork" for the fliers, but says it just appears at his office and he has not written any of the information contained on the sheets.

But others do state they have had input into the process.

Jane Mayer, chairwoman of the 1984 General Plan committee, said that while she herself hasn't written a thing for the handbills she has "made suggestions" for what should be included and has helped to coordinate some of the people involved.

"It's different people all the time, depending on what the issue is," Mayer said.

People have been afraid to state their involvement, Mayer said, because when they do members of the current administration "respond so negatively when people bring up something they don't like."

Also included as an occasional coordinator is Beth Wright, Councilman James Wright's wife.

She became involved, she says, "because we (the Wright home) do get a lot of calls from people concerned about what is going on. We must get 25 calls a week."

The names are confidential, she said, and she did not feel she could reveal them.

Wright said, however, she put some of those people in touch with others who had expressed similar concerns.

"We were dealing with a number of satellite groups," she added.

She would also get calls asking her for information or clarification on some of the issues.

"People wanted to make sure it was accurate," she said.

Both her and Councilman Wright have been shown drafts of the fliers, they said.

"I made some suggestions as to what's appropriate and what isn't. My first concern was that the information was accurate and secondly that it stuck to the issues and did not get into personal attacks on anyone," Jim Wright explained.

Some things would be added or reworded after he saw them, Wright said, not always in a manner he would have preferred.

He has also been asked to speak at group functions, but never has initiated them himself, he said.

Sandy Swain, former planning commission chairwoman, is one person who admits she has participated in writing the last "blue sheet."

"I did it because I think what they are doing to the general plan is unbelievable. I think the way the committee is behaving is also unbelievable — the whole process," Swain said.

There's no record, no minutes of the review committee meetings and five people are "redoing the face of Carmel," Swain said.

"People have got to know what's going on," she said, adding that "we're not rabble-rousing, we just want people to be aware."

As for giving out the names of others who participated, Swain said when "Matt Little releases the names of people of the Carmel Property Owners Association," which was involved in getting the current administration elected, then others might be more willing to come out and state their names.

THAT SITUATION, however, could be changing.

A new group has formed, bringing together some of the people involved in the "blue sheets" and others who have expressed an interest in the direction Carmel is taking.

Howard Nieman, a Carmel resident who has spearheaded much of the debate on the proposed changes in the general plan, was elected chairman March 24 at the group's first meeting.

The group is so new, Nieman said, a name hasn't been determined yet.

Though one of the means of increasing public awareness, Nieman said, will be distributing informational sheets before meetings, the original "blue sheet" groups are "separate and distinct" from the new organization that is forming.

An information sheet will be distributed before the next general plan meeting, Nieman said.

The group, tentatively called Carmel Residents Association, is primarily to "organize our public information approach," Nieman said. Residents of Carmel, people in the "spheres of influence" and busines people are all invited to join, Nieman said.

"I think one of the goals of our organization is to increase public awarness of issues," he explained.

By doing that, Nieman said, people can reach their own conclusions.

A draft by Nieman of the organization's approach states that it is "an association of Carmel area residents and business people concerned about and interested in:

- The maintenance of Carmel's unique quality of life for all residents.
- The need to promote resident-oriented businesses that serve the needs of Carmel area residents.
- The impact of the commercial district on the residential quality of life.
- Developing creative solutions to the problems caused by tourism that advance the common interests of residents, property owners and businesses consistent with Carmel's residential character.
- Preservation of Carmel's unique architectural and village character.

The oft quoted preamble to Carmel's land use ordinance which states that the city is "primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city" functions as the statement of the purpose and objective of the CRA.

The document concludes by stating that "CRA seeks to advance its purposes and objectives through a series of programs and activities including:

- Assembling information regarding city policies and decisions on land use and other important issues.
- Monitoring meetings of the city's decision-making and policy bodies.
- Disseminating information to interested persons and encouraging all Carmel residents to participate in local government.
- Holding regular meetings to exchange ideas among CRA members and public officials to encourage a better understanding of local policy issues and promote the interests of all Carmel residents."

The next meeting, Nieman said, will be held in early April.

Carmel actor making name for himself in Chicago

FROM PLAYING. Jesus Christ in Godspell to hoofing and singing out Everything's Up to Date in Kansas City in Oklahoma! to actually being a Yank at Oxford, Eton and Cambridge towns, is stashing a lot of theater living into a short span for Northwestern University senior Martin Drobac of Carmel (son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Drobac). But now he has a date with Lucie Arnaz!

On May 18, when Arnaz flies to the Windy City to claim her award as Chicago's Actress of the Year at the Sarah Siddons Society Gala in the Guildhall of the Ambassador West, she will be sharing a ray or two of the spotlight with young Drobac. He was the choice of the faculty at Northwestern's School of Speech to receive a Siddons scholarship.

Like Arnaz, who is being honored for her work in My One and Only and began her career as a child in the television hit of her famed parents, Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, Drobac exhibited a theatrical bent from boyhood. Born in Honolulu when his Dad was in the Navy, he grew up in Orinda and Piedmont, one of six lively, energetic, motivated children. His father, an attorney, finally settled his brood in Carmel. As Drobac recalls:

"We all liked to perform. I wouldn't say we were exactly the Von Trapp family but we sang every time guests appeared. We kids put on plays and danced around like dervishes as we all had an excess of energy. But our parents were strict. Bed by six. Spankings as needed. All that good stuff. They were right."

"As a boy I really never thought about what I wanted to be. I was too busy being."

Then it happened. At Robert Louis Stevenson School, the boy from Carmel was struck by the stage. His first show? Grease, followed by the role of Grumio, Petruchio's side-kick in Taming of the Shrew, and here his comedic talents took off.

"But then," he admits, "I was doing what came naturally for I was the class clown. I was the nerd, the geek-ly guy. I always wore black shoes and sox, proper pants and a striped shirt buttoned up to here. No jeans and sneakers for me. Our dress code was set down at home. Combine that with horn-rimmed glasses and you get the picture. I looked funny so I became funny and all of a sudden I was popular!"

Of course his good looks, build of a gymnast, which he is, the substitution of contact lenses and a drive to light up a stage all helped in landing roles in high school productions from Death of a Salesman to Oklahoma! Then came that dream of any campus thespian.

Godspell was the drama and England the destination. The youthful cast raised enough money to take a bus and truck version of the musical to Cambridge, Oxford and Eton and points British for a two-week tour. A stop at Stratford-on-Avon convinced Drobac that the "some day" role he most wanted to essay was that of Puck.

Northwestern honed Drobac's considerable talents as he has appeared in four WAA MU shows, which the Associated Press called "America's finest college musical," and is co-chairman of the 1986 show. On campus he has had leads in West Side Story, Ah, Wilderness and Guys and Dolls. When not beating the books he is beating his feet at Gus Giordano's dance studio, studying singing and giving an out-size portion of time to gymnastics as he aims to combine it with dancing.

His idol? It could only be Gene Kelly.

MARTIN DROBAC of Carmel, a Northwestern University senior, will receive the university speech department's 34th annual Sarah Siddons Society scholarship for "scholastic excellence and exceptional talent" in the name of actress Lucie Arnaz, who will be honored as Chicago's Actress of the Year. The gala ceremony is slated for May 18.

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

The Missing IRA Caper

Chapter Two. The Restaurant

SHE WAS a sultry Asian beauty. And she was in trouble. Big trouble.

"That's right," Bloom answered. "Table for two."

Yes, she definitely was in big trouble. In spite of the rain, Carmel was loaded with tourists and there was not a table available at the grand opening of the Happy Rest Chinese Food Emporium.

Piazza, excitable as usual, fidgeted with the buttons of his damp trenchcoat. Bloom's words were soothing, oil upon the troubled waters.

"It won't be long, Piazza. Not to worry."

"That's not what's bugging me. It's not the wait for the table. I'm sure they won't run out of the Kung Pao Chicken."

"Then what is it?"

"It's this life that we lead, being investment detectives during the last few days of IRA season. The last pure IRA season of our time!"

"Well, Piazza, it's like this. The life of the investment detective is not easy. We both knew that when we started this partnership, not only do we have to help our clients fight the fear of renewed inflation and threat of taxes, but we've also got to encourage them to carry on with their investments with courage, foresight, patience & discipline."

"That's the point, Bloom! What better way to do that than through an IRA? If the citizens of our fabled peninsula don't do one before April 15 this year, they may never qualify again. I told you, we've got to spread the word and guarantee the retirement safety of the citizenry."

"But you and I know, partner, that there is a final loophole down the road. Using our legendary powers of deduction, we know what Washington Sam is trying to make us do."

"Excuse me, sir."

It was the beauty and she was still in trouble.

"A table?"

"No, not yet. I'm so sorry. But did I overhear you handsome occidental gentlemen say you were investment detectives,

"A sweet fortune cookie, Bloom."

"A lady in distress, Piazza. My detective's instincts are functioning at full throttle."

"Kind gentlemen, would you follow me into the frenzied atmosphere of our kitchen. There I will find you food and introduce you to my father, the proprietor of the Happy Rest. He has many questions to ask you about the secret intentions of Washington Sam."

"Ah gentlemen," Mr. Happy Rest said as they entered the kitchen. A crew of cooks in starched white uniforms were clanging their woks with expert concentration.

"Please come this way, to this quiet corner and tell me what a businessman is to do under Tax Reform to properly ward off the heavy hand of Washington Sam?"

"This year it's simple," Bloom began. "Do your IRA by April 15. You may not qualify next year."

"Second," Piazza added, "do you have an employer-sponsored plan for your business, a pension plan or SEP-IRA or a 401K?"

"Not yet."

Bloom said, "Please don't misunderstand us, but you are making a huge mistake. Think about this: Washington Sam has admitted that Social Security won't properly do the retirement trick anymore."

"And now he's punched holes in the IRA, "Piazza added."

"The result," Bloom continued, "is the need for every employer to carry the old retirement ball. That's the secret. And it won't be long before all employees get the word: the best tax-advantaged retirement plan is the one set up for you by your boss. Big Sam left you holding the bag.

"Help yourself to tax breaks throughout a retirement plan, Mr. Happy Rest, and you'll help your employees as well."

All the woks went silent. The dishwasher froze. The sultry Asian daughter held her breath.

"That's it?" Mr. Happy Rest asked. "The retirement business is in the hands of dynamic entrepreneurs like me?"

"That's right. You're the boss in more ways than one."

"Hot dog! I really love this country! All I have to do is set up a retirement plan for the business, save money for myself and make all my employees happy too because some of them may not qualify for an IRA after this year! Am I right?"

"You're a genius," Bloom said.

"Now let's see if you can cook," Piazza added as the smiling cooks began attacking their woks once again. "Hit me with the old Kung Pao."

(Messrs. Piazza and Bloom , associate vice presidents at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., can be contacted for additional information at 373-1861 or PO Box 631, Monterey 93940.)

REMEMBER WHEN???

THEY CAME, WE SAW AND THEY CONQUERED— STANFORD!

A bunch of Stanford students, about thirty of them, banded together as the Stanford Glee Club, invaded our fair city last Saturday afternoon and remained with us until Sunday evening.

Led by their manager, Bradley Wyatt, the first port of call upon the arrival of the boys was the Pine Cone office, where they spread their baggage all over the scenery, and registered. After that, luncheon; and after that, through the courtesy of the Bashams, who tendered the use of the bath house, a swim in the briny.

The boys will always remember the kindness of those Carmelenos who took them in. They are grateful for the substantial home cooking and the motherly tucking in.

Those undergraduates certainly can make some music and do some stunts. They kept the Arts and Crafts Hall, packed to the doors, reverbating with laughter and applause for two hours.

CARMEL COUNCIL SCORNS HIGHWAY DIVISION RULING

Two fixed ideas locked horns at the Carmel City Council meeting last night:

The California Highway Division's insistence on uniformity and Carmel's passion for singularity.

The debate was between the council and J.M. Chaffee, engineer with the San Luis Obispo office of the highway division, over what kind of sign can be placed at the intersection of State Highway One and the Carpenter-Serra Street route, and never have the battle lines between state and city been more sharply drawn, not even over the freeway issue.

Councilmen have wanted an intersection sign saying, "Carmel, North Entrance," to divert traffic by letting motorists know there is also, by implication, a south, or more southerly, entrance on Ocean Avenue, thus relieving some of the congestion in town when too many cars come down the Serra-Carpenter route because drivers believe it's the only entrance to the city.

Tour buses promise to be the big issue again at the first April city council meeting, to be held at 8 pm. Tuesday in City hall chambers.

A tour bus route (along the truck route) and the banning of tour buses entirely from the city until the water crisis is over will be dicussed as the second reading for each ordinance comes.

GARLAND PARK MORTGAGE "BURNING"

A symbolic "burning of the Mortgage" at Garland Ranch Park in Carmel Valley will be held April 3 to mark the final payment on the original 541 acres.

And Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District Manager Gary Tate hopes the celebration will also mark the official formation of a new "Friends of the Park" organization.

The Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District bought the original 541 acres from the late William W. Garland II in March of 1975 for 1.104 million. Under terms of the purchase agreement, the district paid $319,000 down with the balance in installments at a 4.9 percent interest rate.

Children may call 'bunny line' for messages

From now until May 1, youngsters can "cotton" to tales told by Harry the Easter Bunny.

Every day, children in the 408 area code can dial the TELELINE "bunnyline" at 976-2233 and hear a new, two-minute entertaining and educational story straight from the Bunny's whiskered lips.

TELELINE, INC. and Harry the Easter Bunny will donate a portion of each telephone call to California Special Olympics and Special Olympics International. These funds help provide opportunities for mentally retarded athletes to participate in sports competitions throughout California and also at the July 1987 International Summer Olympic games in South Bend, Ind.

One ear up and one ear down, hippity-hopping down the Easter trail, Mr. Bunny weaves wondrous stories with important messages for young callers that help them to understand the joys of preserving, helping others, honesty, safety and friendship.

By calling 976-2233, children can learn what Special Olympics athletes learn when they become part of the international sports program for the mentally retarded.

Songwriter and lyricist Carol Conners, Oscar-nominee for Gonna Fly Now (co-written with Bill Conti) for the film Rocky, authored the 75 fun-filled fables for the "bunnyline."

Charges for dailing 976-2233 in the 408 area code is $2, plus toll, if any.

Children are requested to obtain parental consent before calling Harry the Easter Bunny.

Glittering Arabian Night

MPCC WAS transformed into a Pasha's palace Saturday evening for Santa Catalina Service League's Arabian Nights gala. The gray sparkling program which featured borders of camels, palm trees, oil lamps and a Turkish city silhouette, were the inspired work of Mary Ann Leffel and Robin Aeschliman.

You automatically have a built-in buzz when auctioning and raffling such items as glamorous furs, limo services, and topped off with a 1987 Mercedes Benz as the reverse raffle's top prize.

Belly dancers greeted guests as they entered and later escorted them into the dining emporium. The two runways served the Fire Dancers and the DiFranco Dancers well. The Fire Dancers lit the flame under Aladdin's magic lamp and set the mood for the Turkish delight. The Arabian Nights atmosphere was created by Barbara McFarland and Kay Peloquin with the help of Peterson Conway.

Each table held a palm tree surrounded by rubies, emeralds and pearls casually dropped in desert sand. Table decor was done by Joann Vaughan and Kathy Sparolini as co-chairwomen.

Percy Sequeira said the music and featured dancers were different to those in his native Iraq but he liked them very much.

Dinner was topped with a fashion show by Gerry's Designer Fashions, Impressions D'Italia, Chapeau Chateau, La Porte's jewelry, and Leon Hall of New York. Raffle tickets were drawn throughout the evening and the winner of the Mercedes Benz was Hubert Allen of Santa Cruz County.

Plaudits go to many, but here are a few: co-chairswomen Carol Anstey-Benson and Lois Lagier-Verga DDS, board president Kristin Searle, Carmen Ajan, Cindy Hinkle, Dorothy Kirk, Kathleen Geisler, Phyliss Harkless and, of course, Sisters Carlotta, Christine and Claire.

Members of auxiliary chapters of Children's Services Center met for a rare social benefit at the Willow Tea Room in The Crossroads.

These hardworking members are dedicated "to meet the needs, enhance the well-being, and advocate the causes of our community's children, parents and family." Their sharing of our caring to all families in Monterey County who need help to stabilize and enrich their lives is an ongoing built-in devotion. The staff says "the volunteers are dedicated" and the volunteers say "the staff is dedicated." It must be true on all counts.

The fashion show luncheon was arranged by Elizabeth Brown with the cooperation of Sam Stanley (PR for Crossroads) who presented the CSC with a $1,000 check from Crossroads merchants.

Ninety volunteers filled the art nouveau dining room and some were served in the equally beautiful adjoining bar area. Chapter presidents attending were Kate Rayne (Cypress, Monterey), Virginia Bush (Tres Osos of PG), and Anita McKean (Valley Bears of King City), Linda Dorris is board president and Carol Biddle is executive director of the center.

Modeling clothes from La Bain, Village Sportshoppe, Bill Tosetti's, Buff La Grange, Elizabeth Simmons, For Car Buffs, Donle (opening today), Cats, Chic Petite, Neil's, Rodier Paris, Brittany's and accessories from Accents were Doris Murdock, Liane Barton Grimley, Kim Kelso, Hwey Prasert, Wayne Jackson, Debra Sanders, Patty Ann Stokes, and Laura Cardinale. All models are pros who donated their services.

There was a delicious three-course lunch with wine donated by La Reina Chardonnay. The informal modeling fit perfectly — stimulating style and shopping interest. The Crossroads is a pleasureable place to walk and shop and that's exactly what many were planning to do.

DMR: THE MOST ELEGANT SEASIDE RESORT IN THE WORLD

How about those spectacular, larger-than-life invitations to the Del Monte Revisited (DMR) Edwardian Ball? Artist Jo Mora lives on! His wonderful woodcuts of Edwardian dress and "The Most Elegant Seaside Resort In the World" — the old Del Monte Hotel — are reprinted on the face of the invitation through the efforts of Car van der Burch. This cultural and artistic event will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the Naval Postgraduate School in McNitt Ballroom May 2.

The artistic part celebrates the 80th Anniversary of the opening of the Hotel Del Monte Art Gallery. The cultural comes with the continued support of the local area artists and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Historically, the 1906 San Francisco earthquake resulted in the art gallery opening in order to give the devastated artists a place to show their works and to let the eastern socialites know that California had artists worthy of their attention and acceptance. Such artists as William Keith ("grand master"), Charles Rollo Peters (Bohemian bon vivant), and Arthur Mathews (of Art Nouveau fame) were represented.

In 1907 England was no longer Victorian — the old Queen had died — Russian designer Diaghilev was revolutionizing Paris theatre with barbaric color; dramatists Barrie and Shaw were popular on two continents: movies were shown at nickelodeons and Mary Pickford was "America's Sweetheart," and life was adventurous under Teddy Roosevelt.

Ladies, cinch your waists, pompadour your hair, find an Edwardian long-train gown, a large plumed Merry Widow hat and be ready for Alexander's Ragtime Band. You may wish to Tango, Turkey Trot, or to do The Bunny Hug.

In any case, you certainly will wish to send your check to MPMA ($100 per person) so that you can ride to the Edwardian Ball in style in your horseless carriage. You wouldn't want to miss this once-in-a-lifetime chance to relive the fashionable, evolving cultural and artistic life of 1907 for the evening of May 2.

BAUBLES BANGLES & BIDS

Congregation Beth Israel invites the public to their Fourth Annual Gala Auction May 2 at 6:30 p.m. in the De Anza Ballroom, Doubletree Inn. This year it is called "Baubles, Bangles & Bids."

Kerry and Charles Beren, co-chairpersons, report wonderful packages will be available at both the pre-dinner silent auction and the live auction. These packages don't sound much like baubles and bangles, but they certainly will be incentives for hot-and-heavy bidding.

There will be something-for-everyone art, golf, and tennis, a complete day of beauty with lunch and a shopping spree (one for a lady and one for a gentleman), lodging from Arizona to the gold country and many places in between, a signed Ansel Adams photo (value $3,000), Morley Bear photos, shopping and dining with one of the areas top chefs.

For information call 625-6464 or reserve by check at $25 per person to the temple. Proceeds to benefit the temple's new building fund.

CULINARY IMPERATIVE

Eating in the '80s is entertainment, it's education, it's fashion, and sometimes a course in international relations is needed. Enthusiasm for the exotic, the out-of-season, as well as for old-fashioned farmer's market products are all part of the '80s' culinary scene. There are now 'in" and "out" food as there always have been in fashions, jet-set destinations, art and music.

You won't need a degree in international relations when Highlands Inn offers and intimate week of "Masters of Food & Wine" adventure April 22-27. On the roster is one of Europe's four big "W's" of haute cuisine — Peter Wehlauer (Buhl, Germany), along with Manfred Schwarz (sauce and terrine artist), Josef Viehauser (nouvelle), master patissiers Adolf Anderssen and John Lafer (all of Germany). Celebrated American chefs participating are Wolfgang Puck (Spago, LA) and Jonathan Waxman (Jam's, New York).

You can expect to be inspired, instructed and indulged.

Bringing this array of culinary knowledge to the beautiful ocean setting of Highlands Inn are Vice President Peter Komposch, David Fink (wine and food manager), Executive Chef Don Ferch and Lufthansa Airlines. Highlights will be seminars, cooking sessions, and demonstrations. Field trips to game and farm reserves (such as for edible flowers) and to vineyards are planned along with lunches, dinners, breakfasts and a Sunday brunch.

Master winemakers will include a Cary Gott, William Durney, William Jekel, Eileen Crane, Richard Graff and more. From over the waves there will be Prince Michael Salm zu Salm, Norbert Holderrieth, Brend Phillippi and Bernhard Breuer.

You will find all those answers to the questions about food and wine you have been storing away in the back of your mind. Full event ticket: $475, with events individually priced as well. Some are beginning to sell out, so hurry. To reserve call 624-3801 ext. 145.

CARMEL GARDEN CLUB GOES NATIONAL

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club has accepted an invitation to be an affiliate of the 187-member Garden Club of America. "It is an honor for us," said Fred R. Muhs, president. "At the same time, we consider it a tribute to the programs carried on by our club." Other GCA clubs from California include Atherton, Hillsborough, Piedmont and Orinda.

As a member of GCA, the Carmel club will continue and possibly expand its own programs of civic beautification. Among its successful projects to doate are encouraging the development of Piccadily Park in downtown Carmel and reconstructing the old gardens at Cooper-Molera Adobe, Monterey.

Their current project is a contest co-sponsored by the Carmel Business Association to encourage plantings in the commercial area of Carmel. This contest is open to all downtown merchants with judging set for April 14 and 15. Awards will be announced at Piccadilly Park at 3 p.m. on April 16. For details call CBA 624-2522.

Does your banker work overtime for you?

"My business requires me to work long hours often on complex issues — to work hard right up to the very close of the case. That takes dedication . . .

"I expect the same dedication from my banker. And I've found it at County Bank and Trust. I know my banker works hard to provide me with quick turnaround on loan approvals so I can make business decisions just as fast. In these fast-paced times that's important.

"I'm also very involved in the community and I like knowing the Bank I do business with cares about our town, too! In this age of the 'look out for number one' mentality, it's important to me to work with a business that looks out for others first.

"Whether it's for personal or business banking, you can trust County Bank to work hard for you . . . and our community."

A CHAPEL IN PEBBLE BEACH

Recently a visitor requested directions of a Pebble Beach couple to Erdman Chapel. The reply, "We have lived here 12 years and never knew we had a chapel in Pebble Beach."

Robert Louis Stevenson School, so proud of their award-winning chapel, thought everyone knew about it. Apparently not.

Wishing to do something in memory of his wife, Eleanor, Pardee Erdman selected John Lyon Reid of San Francisco to design the chapel building in 1965. The forest setting complements the architecture of this non-denominational chapel which is used for 175 weddings each year, for baptisms and memorial services, as well as hosting programs sponsored by the Carmel Bach Festival.

Anne Dick, chapel coordinator, (a 30-year Pebble Beach resident) is available to assist with arrangements for the chapel's use. There could not be a better choice for this post. Married for 48 years to her Mel, she loves people, happy occasions, and all the challenges this position presents. Anne has been known to produce a boutonniere in two minutes and she has received many well-deserved hugs and thank you letters.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

How Much Can You Afford? No. 51

By Jayde Thompson

Before you start to look for a home, it's important to be able to know how much you can afford to spend. First, consider the amount you can pay for housing each month. Then you can weigh the pros and cons of the many mortgage options available such as fixed rates and adjustable rate loans.

A lender will look at your monthly income, as well as payments you're making on any long term debts. As a general rule, monthly housing costs should be no more than 28% of your monthly pre-tax income. This includes the mortgage payment, real estate taxes and insurance. If you do have long term debts (student loans, car payments or anything else that will take more than six months to repay) debt service plus housing costs should be less than 36% of your pre-tax monthly income.

Your monthly payments can buy varying amounts of property, depending upon which mortgage option you select. Usually an adjustable rate mortgage plan will enable you to qualify for a higher loan amount. Your Realtor can help you make some of the basic calculations or refer you to a lender who will be able to pre-qualify you for a mortgage.

If there's a move in your future, call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

FIVE DECADES OF DIESELS.

Fifty-one years ago, Mercedes-Benz introduced the world's first production diesel passenger car. And thus began a dynasty of diesel innovations. Today, the innovations continue. And Mercedes-Benz diesels are, in the words of Car and Driver, "the only diesels Americans still want to buy." Engines renowned for their rock-ribbed reliability. KELLY SERVICES DONATES TEMPORARY HELP TO LOCAL NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Kelly Services' Monterey office has selected eight local non-profit organizations to receive a total of 64 hours of free temporary help in celebration of Kellyweek 1987, March 15-21.

Winners of Kelly's special offering include: The Steinbeck Festival, American Lung Association, Pacific Grove Art Center, Childrens Service Center, "Proyecto Saber," Hospice of Monterey Peninsula, Special Olympics, Monterey County AIDS Project.

Kelly has pledged 27,193 work hours — equal to 13 years of one employee working a 40-hour week — to over 2,000 winning organizations. Kelly offices thorughout the U.S., Canada and Puerto Rico held drawings this week to choose the winners.

"We hope that our donation of free temporary help — in such areas as personal computer or word processing assistance, packing and delivering, or telemarketing fundraising support — will assist these local non-profit organizations in their important business of giving," said Melanie Rolfe, Kelly's Monterey and Salinas Branch Manager. "It's Kelly Services' way of saying thank you to our customers, temporary employees and our communities for working with us during the year."

Each winning organization will receive eight hours of free temporary help. They may redeem this offer anytime before August 15, 1987, selecting temporary help services from among more than 100 job categories that Kelly provides. These include secretarial work, word processing and personal computer assistance, data entry, packing and moving, telephone fundraising support and other services.

William B. Brown

A memorial service for family and friends took place Mar. 28 at the Carmel Valley home of William Beresford Brown, descendent of a pioneer family, longtime peninsula resident and civic leader, who died Mar. 24 at home. He was 74.

Born May 12, 1912 in Piedmont, he moved with his family to Carmel in 1923. He graduated from the University of California at Berkeley, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and the Cornell University Graduate School of Hotel Administration.

During World War II he was a lieutenant colonel in the Army Air Corps and served in the European Theater. After the war, he was manager of the Desert Air Hotel resort in Palm Springs.

Upon retirement from the hotel business, he became a certified life underwriter and was with Prudential Life Insurance Co. for more than 30 years. He was also associated with the Monterey Insurance Agency.

He was a former president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, founding director of the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, former president of the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association. FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Love is sharing

Ladies Day, Rotary, March 23

A few months ago I was working at the church in Salinas. I listened to Phil Donahue's television talk show (I don't have a TV at home). Donahue hosted a group of irate women who complained that their husbands came home from work, had a beer, ate dinner in silence, then with a couple of more beers they stretched out on an Easy-Boy recliner and watched TV until they fell asleep.

They said that weekends were worse and that their marriages were dying on the vine for lack of communication and sheer boredom. They stated that they could have thrown a few beer cans, yelled and hollered, but that they did none of these things.

They organized a union and went "on strike for love." They said that to accept this situation with a passive or docile manner only made things worse. Which reminds me of the reply of an Indian doctor in Bombay when asked how to curb his country's growing birth rate: "Give every husband a color TV."

When either spouse suffers a real or imaginery injustice in silence, a boiling cauldron of anger and resentment grows until it explodes like Mt. St. Helens.

Now here is Dr. Farrell's yearly advice to the married and lovelorn. In my two decades in Rotary I modestly consider that I have become a world's authority on the subject. True communication and the expression of mutual love is neither passive nor is it aggressive, but rather it is a sensitive and considerate sharing.

Passive behavior is based on fear and is doomed to a milk-toast defeat. Aggressive behavior is based on anger and frustration and brings about massive retaliation. Mutual respect is what love is all about. It means that the husband and the wife feel good about each other and that feeling flows over to their neighbors.

As the Anglican Padre says, "here endeth the first lesson." However, next year I expect a miraculous report telling me that my advice has been heeded. I do not anticipate a notice of a funeral or a murder. Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Who feels better, old people or young? The surprising results of a Louis Harris and Associates poll are that, in general, younger Americans have more common complaints about their health than seniors. Last year, 85 percent of the young people surveyed reported that they'd had at least one headache, compared with just 50 percent of people over 65. Younger people also suffered more stomach aches, more muscle pains, dental pains and backaches. The only area in which seniors showed a higher incidence of common complaints was joint pain; 71 percent of older people experienced it, compared with just 41 percent of younger people.

The bathroom is no place to keep your medications, Dr. Arthur I. Jacknowitz, a pharmacy professor at West Virginia University, warns in a recent article. Steam from a bath or shower, he writes, can cause drugs to spoil or lose their effectiveness. Some medications require refrigeration; most should be kept in a cool, dry, dark place such as a linen closet or kitchen cabinet.

Inmates' imaginations take wing in art exhibit at Cherry Foundation

By DAVID LELAND

IT HAS been said that art has no boundaries. Perhaps one of most graphic examples of this can be seen in the portrait work of prison inmates.

Locked in the grim surroundings of the state Correctional Training Facility at Soledad, about 50 miles southeast of the Monterey Peninsula, 20 prisoners within the art program while away the years drawing and sketching their hopes and dreams.

"It consumes the time, but it's valuable and very satisfying," said Brian Young, who has been incarcerated for 12 of his 31 years. "I get into my art and I could be anywhere."

Young is one of the inmate-artists whose work will be featured beginning this Saturday, April 4, in the gallery at the Carl Cherry Foundation in Carmel. The exhibit will continue through April 25 at the foundation, which is located at Fourth Avenue and Guadalupe Street.

For Young, who spends as many as 12 hours drawing each day, art borders on an obsession.

"I draw all day and then I come home and draw," said Young, who began his sentence at 18 when he was convicted of kidnapping for ransom while committing bank robbery.

Home for Young is one of the small, dark cells he shares with another inmate within the wings of Soledad prision's maximum-security section. And, while Young does not have a release date, he hopes to be out "within five years."

But to hear him speak of his search for color instruction after drawing with pencil up until two years ago, it becomes apparent that artwork serves as an "early release" for Young.

Young and his fellow inmates are learning their skills through a state program, which offers art classes within the prison system.

Through Arts in Correction, they receive weekly instruction by professional artists from the "outside" — Victoria Sulski and Guillermo Aranda.

"It's a good way to do my time," said David Williams, 25, who has until 1988 to complete a sentence he began in 1983 for "numerous crimes."

Williams' forte, which is featured in the foundation's art show, is his pencil-sketched portraits. Not only are these pictures meticulously drawn, but they are also done in record time.

Williams, who has no formal training yet won his first scholarship at the age of 13, calls himself a "quick draw" artist. It takes him only about an hour to complete one of his portraits.

YOUNG SPEAKS highly of the arts program offered at the prison, which gives him a chance to find his identity in an environment filled with nameless faces putting in time.

"I don't see the art program as part of the correctional system," he said. "The art program is like a haven. You don't feel like a second-class citizen."

Young said the inmates police each other while attending art classes. No stealing or con games are allowed.

"We tell the new students when they come in for the first time 'not to wreck it for the rest of us,'" Young explained.

Through the arts program at Soledad, artists are also able to enter their work in statewide and national competitions in search of awards and recognition.

For Williams this opportunity for validation is especially gratifying. The orginal scholarship he was awarded, which was to be applied toward art school, went unclaimed.

Williams never went on to art school after drawing his award-winning pictures while in juvenile hall in San Francisco. Until now, his work has only been seen within the prison walls.

It seems fitting for Williams, who hopes to become a commercial artist or a court reporter upon his release, that the current exhibit is called Over Prison Walls: Art From Soledad.

In addition to the portraits and watercolor landscapes that will be displayed at the Cherry Foundation, a portion of a 44-by-6-foot mural will also be unveiled.

The 6-by-20-foot section of the mural is part of an on-going project by students of Guillermo Aranda, and will eventually be hung in the visiting room at Soledad's north facility.

The mural is a powerful example of the inmates' singular vision and reflects both the intensity of the prision environment as well as visuals from the outside world.

FOR BRIAN Young art has become a release from the daily drudgery of prison life. Young, who began drawing upon entering prison a dozen years ago, spends as many as 12 hours a day drawing. (Holly McFarland photo.)

IN CHARGE of the arts program at Soledad Prison, Jack Bowers coordinates the outside professionals who make up the state Arts in Corrections program. Here, Bowers is shown before a mural painted by the inmates in the prison's north facility. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Local organization lobbies for artists' rights and legislation

THE NEWLY ORGANIZED Central Coast Chapter of Artist Equity Association (AEA) will meet Monday, April 6 in Monterey.

Artists, gallery owners and the general public are invited to join the organization. The nationwide group works on many legislative levels to advocate artist's legal and moral rights and to promote government programs which benefit artists, such as Percent-for-Art in Architecture.

Current advocacy efforts include such issues as the restoration of full market value tax deductions for artists' gifts to museums and other cultural institutions, the establishment of fair estate tax policies for artists and the promotion of fair and professional relationships between artists and dealers.

Upcoming activities of the Artist Equity Central Coast Chapter include an evening with state Sen. Henry Mello. Among the topics will be the importance of involvement of artists and cultural leaders in the formulation and support of art legislation. The program will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 16 in the community room of Monterey Savings in the Estrada Adobe on Tyler Street in Monterey. Doors will open at 7:30 p.m.

Regular meetings are conducted at 7:30 p.m. the first Monday of each month, also at the Estrada Adobe.

Standing committees have also been formed. Roberto Lupetti, 624-7457, is in charge of membership. Other committee members are Pamela Benda and Teresa Dunleavy, publicity; Mike Duffy, programs; June Duran, Jerry Motto and George Bleich, legislation and information; Julie Harvey, hospitality.

For more information about the local chapter of Artist Equity or to have a member address your group, contact George Bleich at 372-2717.

Carmel Music Society presents cellist Carter Brey

CELLIST CARTER Brey will be presented in recital by the Carmel Music Society at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 9. The concert will take place in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Barbara Weintraub will be the pianist.

When cellist Carter Brey made his Washington D.C. debut in 1982, The Washington Post critic referred to him as "a young Heifetz, Horowitz or Rostropovich" with "nearly flawless technique" and "spectacular musical ability." That same season, he made his New York debut and prompted Bernard Holland of The New York Times to comment: "The music world — which is already bursting with young cello talent — will have to make room for Mr. Brey."

Such raves are not uncommon for the young artist who was presented with an Avery Fisher Career Grant in 1983 and one year later the Gregor Piatigorsky Memorial Prize. The most recent honor was the Michael's Award of Young Concert Artists which brought him an Alice Tully Hall debut and performances as soloist with several American orchestras. Brey has appeared with the American Symphony, Buffalo Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony under Claudio Abbado, Cleveland Orchestra with Christoph Von Dohnanyi, Houston Symphony, Pittsburgh Symphony and the Seattle Symphony Orchestra.

In 1981, the American-born cellist came to the attention of Mstislav Rostropovich when he took top prize at the first Rostropovich International Cello Competition in Paris. Rostropovich subsequently presented him as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra to critical acclaim. As winner of the Young Concert Artists International Auditions, he was presented in his New York debut at the 92nd Street Y and his Washington, D.C. debut at the Kennedy Center. Among other honors, Brey holds the first Anne and George Popkin Cello Chair on the Young Concerts Artists roster and he was the first musician to win the Performing Arts Prize of the Arts Councils of America, which includes a Paris debut recital.

Carter Brey has performed extensively as an ensemble player and was formerly a member of the Rogeri Trio. He has performed chamber music at the Santa Fe Festival, Library of Congress Summer Festival, as a featured guest artist with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, and will participate in the 1985 Spoleto Festivals in Charleston, South Carolina and in Italy. Highlighting upcoming seasons are performonaces as solist with the Pittsburgh, Denver and St. Louis Symphonies, the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Pinchas Zukerman, and on the Distinguished Artists Series at New York's 92nd Street Y.

Brey won top prize at the International Munich Competition for Dùos in 1978 with pianist Barbara Weintraub. Weintraub and Brey have recorded sonatas by Rachmaninoff and Chopin, recently released on the Music Masters label. Brey's studies were with Laurence Lesser and Stephen Kates at the Peabody Conservatory and with Aldo Parisot at Yale University, where he was a Wardwell Fellow and a Houpt Scholar. His cello is a rare J.B. Guadagnini made in 1754.

For ticket information contact the Carmel Music Society at 625-9938.

THE CARMEL Music Society will present cellist Carter Brey at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 9 in Sunset Theater, Carmel. He will be accompanied by pianist Barbara Weintraub. For ticket information, call 625-9938.

Watsonville Band performs free

THE OVERTURE from The Merry Wives of Windsor, a medley of Broadway tunes and other works will be featured during a Tuesday, April 7 performance by the Watsonville Band at Sunset Theater in Carmel. Admission is free.

The 8 p.m. program will also feature Mosaico Mexicano, an original work commissioned by the band for its 1979 Mexico tour. The 13-minute overture was premiered in Mexico City and then presented as a gift to the Mexican people.

The band will celebrate its 40th anniversary with a tour to the South Pacific in summer 1988. The group of more than 700, which includes band and booster members, will tour New Zealand, Fiji and on July 4 perform at Expo 88 in Brisbane, Australia.

The band, along with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, is one of two organizations to be invited by the U.S. Government to perform on United States Day at the Expo.

County symphony introduces youngsters to the classics

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony will present free youth concert at Sunset Theater in Carmel on Thursday, April 2. There will be two concerts, one at 9:30 a.m. and one at 10:50 a.m. for some 5,000 fourth and fifth grade students from throughout Monterey County.

Music Director and Conductor Clark E. Suttle and the full Monterey County Symphony Orchestra will perform a variety of works and present an overview of music by Gabrielli, Susato, Handel, Mozart and Rimsky-Korsakov. The program will begin with music from "pre-historic times" and continue with a Gregorian Chant, Sonata Piano e Forte, Four Dances from Danserye, Handel's Fireworks Music, Overture to The Marriage of Figaro, and end with Rimsky-Korsakov's brilliant Russian Easter Overture — showing all the students what a long path we have travelled in the thousand years since the Gregorian Chant was first written.

The Youth Concerts are the culmination of a series of In-School Music Demonstrations provided to the Monterey County Schools by the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra's Community Outreach Program. This year, schools from Prunedale and Echo Valley in North Monterey County — and south through Salinas, Alisal, Greenfield, Gonzales, Chualar, King City, Lockwood, Bradley and San Ardo were among those schools visited by ensembles of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra musicians. Members of the brass, string, woodwind and percussion sections of the orchestra spent weeks "on the road" giving In-School Demonstrations to the fourth and fifth grade students, playing a variety of short pieces for the students, using music to tell stories and to illustrate various musical styles. Now the students will be coming to either Sherwood Hall or to Sunset Theater to see and hear how the sections of the instruments presented in demonstrations interact in a full orchestral setting.

These In-School Music Demonstrations and the Youth Concerts — programs of vital importance to the boys and girls of Monterey County — once supplemented existing music programs. But with budgetary cutbacks the Monterey County Symphony now provides to many schools the only professionally-planned music education series.

The Youth Concerts are made possible by grants from: AT and T Youth Fund, City of Carmel, City of Monterey, City of Salinas, City of Seaside, Grover Hermann Foundation, Film Funds Trust Funds, Mildred Hitchcock Huff Charitable Trust, Monterey County Cultural Council, Monterey County Office of Education, Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, and the Music Performance Trust Fund, A.F. of M. Musicians' Union Local 616.

Tickets available for Severinson pops concert

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony Assocation reports that tickets are now on sale for the appearance of Doc Severinsen with the County Symphony.

Doc Severinsen, music director of Johnny Carson's Tonight Show, will be joined by his jazz-fushion group, Xebron, when he appears in this special one-time-only pops concert with the entire Monterey County Symphony on Saturday, April 25, at Sherwood Hall in Salinas.

Voted among the top brass instrumentalists for the past 10 years, Severinsen has won many polls and awards for his expertise on the trumpet. He is in demand as a headliner each year in Las Vegas and Atlantic City, as well as guest soloist with symphony orchestras across the United States.

This concert will be special for it marks the reunion of Doc with Clark Suttle, music director-conductor of the Monterey County Symphony. Suttle came to Monterey in 1985 from the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra where Doc is the resident conductor of the Phoenix Pops. One of the musical numbers to be performed is one that Maestro Suttle arranged especially for Doc.

Doc will be featured with the symphony playing the Trumpet Concerto by Fisher Tull. He and Xebron (Rich Eames, keyboards; Tom Rizzo, guitar; Jeff D'Angelo, bass; Ron Davis, drums) will perform several solo numbers as well as others integrated with the symphony orchestra.

Because there will be only one performance, all seats are reserved and available only at BASS and Ticketron agencies. For further information call the symphony office in Carmel at 624-8511.

Carl Jung group studies alchemy

A TALK designed to give background information on the beginnings of alchemy, "The Color Stages of Alchemy," will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung at 7 p.m. Friday, April 3 at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

On the following day, Saturday, April 4, there will be a follow-up workshop: "Color Stages of Alchemy and Behavioral Change" — both events to be conducted by James Skinner, M.A., president of the Central Coast Jung Society, Los Osos.

Focus of the workshop will be the drawings in the alchemical text, La Toison D'Or, published in Paris in 1612. Participants will be provided with colored pencils so that they each may color a set of drawings, and keep them. To gain some sense of the alchemical journey, participants will be asked to give personal reactions to the 22 drawings from the book. A review will then follow of the color stages from the point of view of classical Greek philosophy, Jungian psychology and General Systems Theory.

Skinners research was done partly with the rare book collection of the Library of Congress. Since the ancient alchemists aimed to "confuse," Skinner will relate how some of his confusions came about during his "alchemical journey."

The public is invited to both events. Donations are requested to help defray costs of materials and travel. The Friends of C.G. Jung is an informal collection of people who are sharing an enthusiasm for the many seminal ideas of the noted Swiss psychologist. Bay Symphony closes season with competence

UNDER THE VERY capable direction of Denis De Coteau, the Monterey Bay Symphony Chamber Orchestra presented an evening of music from Vienna in its final concert of the season last Sunday, March 29. The concert was a somewhat belated tribute to Haymo Taeuber, retired conductor of this orchestra (which was then known as the Monterey County Symphony.)

Schubert's Eighth Symphony, the "Unfinished," opened the program, in a rather leisurely unfolding which built to a nice climax in the second movement. It was a respectable performance, in spite of some sloppiness in entrances from the wind sections, as De Coteau coaxed a warm string sound for this lyrical work. Personally, I can't imagine what is "unfinished" about this piece — only the textbooks say symphonies have to have four movements.

Jane Orzel, who is principal bassoonist with the orchestra, was soloist in the B-flat Bassoon Concerto, K. 191, by Mozart. This is a thoroughly delightful concerto which showcases the instrument. In spite of the slow pacing of the second movement, Mozart's beautiful melodic lines and dance-like rhythms were evident. The bassoon is such a beautiful instrument that one must pity those who think of it only in some of its less flattering roles. It has an enormous range in several areas — register, dynamics, tone quality. Up to the early classic period, it was a very important instrument. The 19th century orchestra swallowed its dinstinctive tone, but the 20th century has liberated it once more.

Schubert and Mozart do qualify as Viennese composers, although it may not have been exactly what some folks expected from an evening of Viennese music. However, after those two substantial offerings, the evening was turned over to pastries by Lehar and Strauss.

This music is irresistable in its own way. "Gay" would be a perfect adjective, had it not been pre-empted by another use. It is schmaltzy, fun, slightly decadent. They played a couple of overtures, a polka, and a lot of waltzes. Viennese coffee and Sacher torte would have been the perfect accompaniments.

De Coteau did very well with the orchestra. The sound was quite good; intonation greatly improved, although it sagged in slow sections; overall presentation was satisfying, even though the Viennese music did not quite have the gemutlichkeit of a truly Viennese orchestra.

It appears this orchestra will continue another season, with De Coteau at the controls, assisted by Sal Ferrentelli and Jack Bates.

There are apparently still a lot of hurt and hard feelings in the musical community here, occasioned by the unfortunate split of the orchestras. We now have one orchestra made up largely of persons from the Bay area, and a community orchestra made up of local musicians and teachers. That some feel sympathetic toward the latter is quite understandable. That some prefer the virtuosity of the other orchestra is also understandable.

One hopes this is not a no-win situation. This is too small a community to support two orchestras indefinitely. Since the County Symphony is presently in a position of more strength, they are the ones who could best offer the sign of peace. "Harmony" means a lot more than notes played simultaneously.

Variety of vehicles highlights 32nd annual Karkapades

THE ALL-NEW 32nd Annual Coors KarKapades rolls into four buildings and spills out onto the lawns plus the arena at the Fairgrounds in Monterey for one weekend only, Friday through Sunday, April 3-5.

One of the features will be legendary ZZ Top's bright red 1933 Ford coupe from the cover of the band's million-selling "Eliminator" album and star of their videos.

The Eliminator coupe is a project of ZZ Top guitarist Billy Gibbons and was built by Don Thelan of Buffalo Motor Cars. They chopped the top three inches on the original steel body, filled and rolled the rear pan, inset the license plate, hand-fabricated the three-piece hood, lowered the headlights and added 1939 Ford taillights. Powered by a high-performance 350-cubic-inch Chevy V-8, the Eliminator is finished in Cadillac Dynasty red acrylic enamel and highlighted with ZZ graphics by Kenny Youngblood.

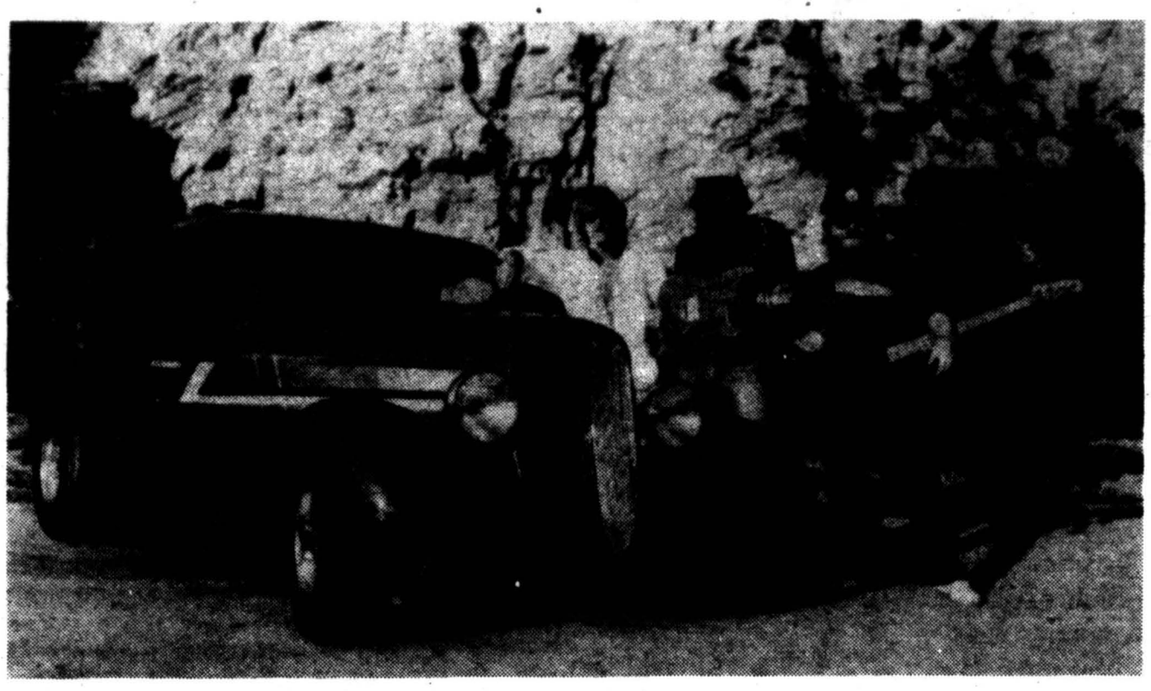
An action-packed, breath-taking attraction at the event next weekend will be motorcyclists Ricardo Perez and Todd Anderson, risking their lives inside the two-story-high Douglas MacValley "Globe of Death." Perez will perform the loop-the-loops with hands in the air while riding upside-down. Then joined by Anderson, the two follow each other, ride side-by-side holding hands; and as a climax, they crisscross both horizontally and vertically sometimes brushing each other as they pass. The unbelievable act has been called "Globe of Death" ever since a MacValley cousin lost his life when his motorcycle fell on top of him. Ricardo Perez was injured in a similar accident in January but has never missed a performance throughout the current tour.

KarKapades is one of nearly 200 Winston Championship Auto Shows sanctioned annually by the International Show Car Association throughout the United States, Canada and several foreign countries. Owners and builders of uniquely customized, modified and restored vehicles from California, Nevada, Arizona and Oregon will join these from the local area in a judged competition for over 100 awards, merchandise and more than $1,250 in cash. Anyone interested in participating should contact Vicki Bender at 4309 Raiders Way, Modesto, CA 95355, or call (209) 522-0833.

ISCA officials will divide the entries into such classes as hot rods, customs, street machines, sports cars, pickups & vans, lowriders, racing vehicles, boats, antiques and classics, off-road and special interest. ISCA judges take most of the weekend to evaluate the body, interior, undercarriage, engine and safety features of each individual creation. Winners are honored in special ceremonies at 7 p.m. on Sunday.

The value of awards won by ISCA members enables them to earn points toward the Pacific Division and overall Winston Championships, which offer more than $500,000 in cars, merchandise and cash prizes at the close of the season. More than 25,000 contestants will compete in the 1987 circuit which includes the Oakland Roadster Show, Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle before concluding in Oklahoma City.

Each entry has been individually customized and/or restored and some are completely handbuilt with expenditures more than $100,000. Many are presented with displays in an effort to win best-in-show and perhaps go on to be crowned division or international champion.



THE 1933 Ford coupe immortalized on the cover of ZZ Top's "Eliminator" album is among the featured vehicles at this year's KarKapades. The event rolls into the Monterey Fairgrounds Friday through Sunday, April 3-5.

In addition to the vehicles displayed inside the various buildings, there will again be a "Cruise-In" display area on the grassy lawns both Saturday and Sunday afternoons hosted by radio station KWSS for those not interested in the judged competition. Those who want to take part need not pre-register. They should just bring their vehicles to the fairgrounds between 10 a.m. and noon on either day. There are participant pins for everyone and special award plaques presented by Western Street Machine Association in several categories.

For those involved in building and customizing miniature model cars, there will be a competition organized by the Monterey Bay Scale Auto Association. Prizes will be awarded by a variety of classifications.

Hours will be 6 to 10 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday at the fairgrounds in Monterey. Free discount coupons are available at Seven-Eleven Stores throughout the area.

Past blood recipients to be offered free AIDS tests at hospital

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will provide free blood tests for all patients who received blood transfusions between 1977 and June 30, 1985 to help them determine if they have been exposed to the AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) virus.

The testing program began March 24 and is the result of a recommendation by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) that such patients have their blood tested, even though CDC indicated there is a very low risk of getting the AIDS virus from a blood transfusion.

The years 1977 to 1985 were targeted because that was the period between the discovery of the virus associated with AIDS and development of a routine screening procedure designed to protect blood supplies.

"For a number of reasons, we believe it is important for these people to know if they have been exposed to the AIDS virus," said Community Hospital Senior Vice President Jay Hudson. "We view it as our responsibility to the public to offer these tests without charge and to counsel people as needed. We urge people in this group to call us and schedule an appointment."

The hospital has established a special telephone line (626-1022) to receive calls for appointments for the blood test.

Hudson said it is important that people schedule appointments so the testing process can be handled in a confidential and orderly fashion. There is no urgency in obtaining the test. Standardized testing procedures will be followed, including confirmatory testing of initially positive results.

"As many as 12,000 blood transfusions were given at Community Hospital during that period," he said. "But some may have moved away from the Monterey Peninsula and some may not want to have their blood tested. Thus we don't have an accurate estimate of how many tests we'll perform."

"It's important for everyone to know that a positive test does not necessarily mean they have AIDS. It only means they have been exposed to the AIDS virus."

Hudson stressed that the hospital will take steps to insure anonymity during the testing procedure. Each person who requests the blood test will be given a code number and their name will not be used.

Individuals who have not had a blood transfusion but who wish to be tested should contact their personal physician or the Monterey County Health Department alternate test site at 899-4271.

New yoga workshop to be presented at Sunset Center

"WE ALL are energy directors," according to Kali Rae, founder of the Kali Rae Yoga Academy, Santa Cruz, which will present a workshop, The Tri-Yoga System of Fitness and Health, at Sunset Center in Carmel on Saturday, April 11.

Rae expressed empathy with everyone who wants more energy in their lives. She explained, "We receive energy — through breathing, eating, absorbing sunlight — then we direct it through our thoughts, actions and words. The aim is to direct energy in a positive steady flow."

But what happens? "When the body and mind are stressed, the energy becomes blocked or unbalanced. Then it manifests in fear and stress patterns, preventing us from being all that we have the potential to be."

As energy directors, we can consciously choose our thoughts, actions and words, instead of mindlessly allowing old patterns to repeat themselves.

The workshop on April 11 will demonstrate, the teacher said, that even in a short time, the practices of Hatha Yoga begin to release patterns of tension in the body, thus freeing-up energy for creative pursuits. "The more we direct our energy in a positive way, the more completely old patterns such as fears, impatience, anxiety and feelings of inadequacy fall away. Negative, blocking qualities are replaced with positive ones such as happiness, joy, creativity, peace."

The word yoga comes from the Sanskrit language. It means union — unity body, mind and spirit. Hatha Yoga is a science of health which has been used for thousands of years. As part of the ancient wisdom of the East, it was designed to bring total health, and ultimately peace, to its practitioners. Kali Rae summed up this history in the simple statement, "It works!"

The three components of Tri-Yoga are:

Hatha Yoga: Asanas, or postures, are taught with emphasis on correct body alignments and pranayama, or breathing practices. The postures are sustained, and when released, there is a flow into the next posture with a connecting movement.

Flowing Yoga: The stretching and strengthening asanas of Hatha Yoga are synchronized with the breath in a variety of flowing-movement series. As the body flows, the energy flows.

Aerobic Yoga: Also known as Yogaerobics, these postures and breathing practices increase blood circulation and oxygen supply in the body. The asanas flow at a more rapid pace for the aerobic effect, and energizing pranayamas are used, as the word aerobic literally means "with oxygen." Each asana is held for one breath, then flows in a smooth transition into the next asana.

Through the practice of the Tri-Yoga System, one begins to feel "at home" in the body. "When the body relaxes, the mind becomes clearer and calmer, because the mind is energy and is located within each cell of the body. With a steady flow of energy being released, the body and mind are in harmony. This brings a sense of well-being to the spirit," explained Kali Rae.

The workshop on the Tri-Yoga System for Fitness and Health will meet from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 11, in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center, Carmel. The cost is $10.

For additional information or registration, call 429-9138.

Surrealistic photo visions by Kim Weston exhibited

THE WORK OF third generation photographer Kim Weston, whose grandfather Edward Weston was the founding father of modernism in photography, will be featured in an exhibition opening Friday, April 3 at the Weston Gallery in Carmel.

The exhibition will open with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday at the gallery, located on Sixth Avenue between Lincoln and Dolores.

Weston brings a new vision to the medium and breaks with the unmanipulated "straight" photographic tradition of his family. Weston employs studio sets which are parodies of reality, and orchestrates his images to observe aspects of culture and our perceptions.

By using models and their relationship to the erstaz sets, ideas are acted out in the series of still photographs. In spite of the serial nature of the images each can be isolated and witnessed on its own.

Each image is unique. The negative is afixed to the back of each mount and sold together with the print.

The exhibit will continue through May 1. For more information, call the Weston Gallery at 624-4453.

Tax experts will offer free advice

State income tax experts will be available to answer questions on Saturdays, according to the Franchise Tax Board.

The toll-free tax hotline will take calls on Saturdays, April 4 and 11, from 10 am. to 7 p.m., to assist Californians with their state income taxes.

The hotline, which began operation in 1978, is designed to provide year-round tax assistance. Highly trained tax experts are available to assist taxpayers with the completion of their returns, provide tax law information, and answer questions regarding bills and notices.

The local number to call is (800) 852-7050.

"It is my hope by extending services to these two Saturdays, that it will enable those who need assistance to get immediate help without cost to themselves," said Francise Tax Board Chairman, State Controller Gray Davis.

Weekday hours for the toll-free hot line are 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. until April 15.

Vidor, Tyson watercolors teamed during benefit show

A BENEFIT exhibit of watercolors by Carolyn Tyson and Belinda Vidor Holliday will open with a 5 to 8 p.m. reception Friday, April 3 in the S.F.B. Morse Gallery at Robert Louis Stevenson School, Pebble Beach. Proceeds of paintings sold will benefit the school art department.

CAROLYN TYSON, poet, painter, will be represented in both media during a benefit art exhibit opening Friday at the Morse Gallery in Pebble Beach.

Carolyn Tyson was born in Southampton, Long island, and was brought up in historic Montauk. She resided in Carmel for 35 years and counted among her neighbors the poet Robinson Jeffers, whom she said greatly encouraged her work. Tyson is a member of the Kearsage Group in Napaque and the Institute of Modern Art in New York.

Belinda Vidor was born in Beverly Hills and was educated in Southern France and Paris. She studied fine art and design at Mills College in Oakland and later studied with Jan Stussey at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Vidor's work has been exhibited in galleries in Beverly Hills, Palm Springs and Jackson, Wyo. Her work is in private collections around the United States.

A founding officer of the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation, Vidor in recent years has studied with Elaine Badgely Arnoux of San Francisco, and, on the Monterey Peninsula, Sam Colburn and Victor DiGesu.

The S.F.B. Morse Gallery is open 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. weekdays and by appointment. This art exhibit continues through May 1. For additional information or an appointment, call 624-1257.

BELINDA VIDOR'S watercolors are teamed with those of Carolyn Tyson in an April exhibit at the S.F.B. Morse Gallery. The gallery is located on the grounds of Robert Louis Stevenson School on Forest Road in Pebble Beach. A reception for the artists is scheduled 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, April 3.

Bicyclists pedal to halt Multiple Sclerosis

Multiple Sclerosis Community Services and the Velo Club, Monterey Inc. will sponsor the third annual Steinbeck Century Bike Ride for MS on Sunday, April 5.

A choice of four rides will be offered — 31 miles, 62 miles, The Steinbeck Century and Monterey Loop Century, all of which begin and end at the Salinas Memorial VFW Post 7895 in Salinas.

This event is a fundraiser for people with Multiple Sclerosis in the tri-county area. It is particularly appropriate to choose this form of recreation as a means of raising money to fight Multiple Sclerosis, because MS robs many of the ability to do such a thing as riding a bicycle.

The Weston Gallery will feature the photographs of 3rd generation photographer
Mr. Kim Weston / April 3 - May 1, 1987.
Please attend an opening reception for the artist Friday April 3, 6-8 p.m. and view Mr. Weston's photographs in the tradition of the surrealists of the 1920's.

You don't have to be an American to die of a heart attack.

You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. And that's one reason the United States has the highest incidence of heart attack in the world. At the American Heart Association, we're trying to help Americans change the way they live. And die.

Just a little out of Carmel...

We take you now to Doughtery Court, a spacious yet sequestered cul-de-sac near the mouth of the Valley. (Take the first turn right off Carmel Knolls, then a second turn right). There are 5 houses ranged in a semi-circle around the Court. We're interested in the center one, No. 26072.

It's two stories high, set back from the street across a garden of junipers. Great windows, all with double banks of inside shutters, look eastward far up the Carmel Valley. A colonnaded front terrace marks the entrance.

The first floor plan is a model of designing skill. The entrance hall rises the full two stories, a staircase goes up at the right to a balcony that leads off to 4 bedrooms and 2 baths.

Directly ahead from the entrance is the well appointed kitchen and breakfast area. All built-in appliances and the refrigerator are included. Or...you have a choice of going left to the sunken living room and the dining room. If instead you move to the right, you step down into the informal den. Both den and living room have fireplaces at the far end, flanked by bookshelves.

The den opens through sliding glass doors to a broad, paved terrace and a delightfully private swimming pool. With the Valley sun, it's a great place for entertaining or just relaxation.

There are 2½ baths, the guest powder room off the front hall and two baths upstairs. All are attractively papered and nicely lighted. The master bedroom and bath, with spacious dressing area, private shower and commode, are right at the top of the stairs. The other bedrooms are to the left. All are generous in size, all have mirrored closet doors, all have spectacular views.

This is an ideal home for a family, near schools, the Carmel Rancho shopping centers, golf courses and tennis, and an easy run to downtown. The lot is ¼ acre, the house is 2400 square feet. The price is $314,000; and if you happen not to favor green, there's a generous carpet allowance.

OPEN FOR INSPECTION THIS SATURDAY & SUNDAY NOON TO FIVE!

CARMEL LEGENDS

Post Script to Legend No. 7

One of Carmel's most respected historiennes, Marjory Lloyd, has taken issue with our story of the great Fraser Feud of 1906-14. "FRASER WAY", she says, "was not named after either Hector of Wilbur Fraser, but after A.P. Fraser, the first mayor of Carmel. He had originally named this short lane 14th Avenue. But when the developers of the Mission Tract laid out their subdivision south of Santa Lucia some time later, they designated their first cross street 14th Avenue." this caused nothing but confusion, and it was Mrs. Fraser* who resolved it by suggesting, "Why don't we call it FRASER WAY" We have pursued our studies of the Fraser brothers and can now report that Wilbur gave up his dream of establishing a public inn and became the rector of a small Episcopalian parish in the Portola Valley. Hector made a series of unfortunate investments and died almost penniless in 1947 in Jamestown, California. He was then the proprietor of a small pub, called Fraser's Folly. What a curious switch of ambitions!

*The fact is, says Marjory, that Mrs. Fraser had passed away by this time. So her suggestion came via divine revelation.

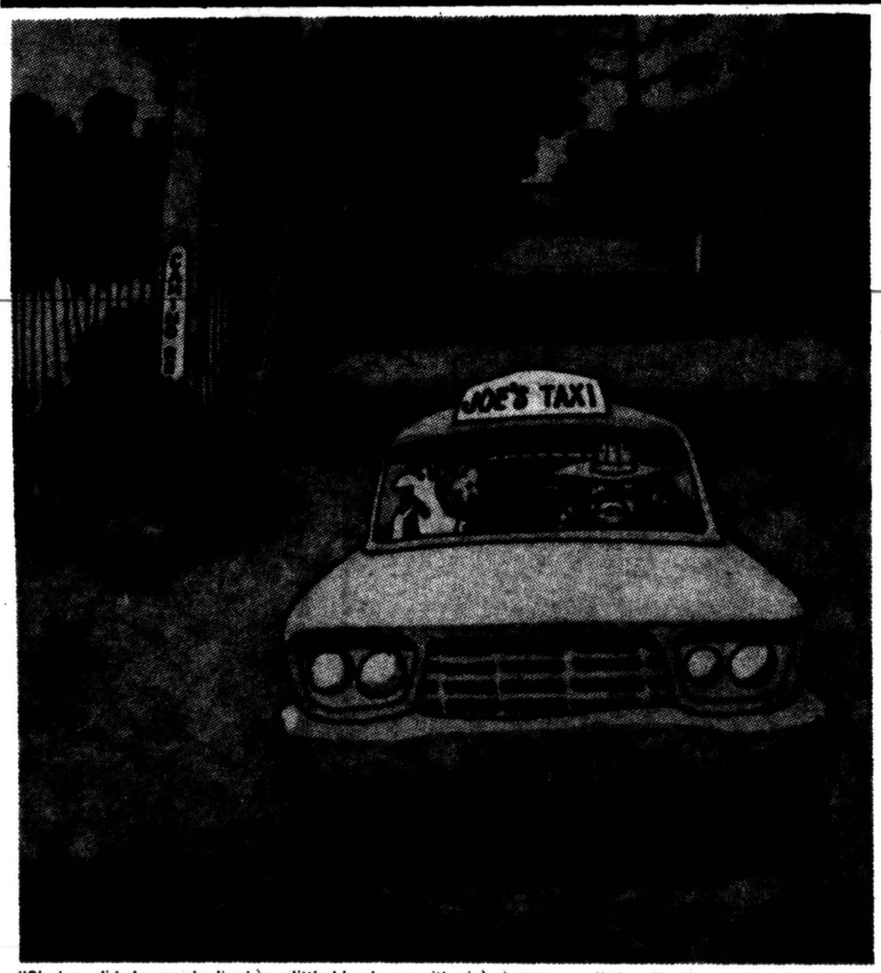
CARMEL BY BILL BATES



"Oh dear, did she say she lived in a little blue house with pink shutters or a little yellow house with blue shutters? No...I remember, she said it was a little grey house with green shutters and a broken gate...or was it a little brown house with orange shutters and no gate. No, she said it was a little..."
